MILLIONS of women are interested in the charge of murder against Mrs. Frances S. Hall of New Jersey, wealthy widow of an Episcopalian clergyman. The clergyman and Mrs. Mills, a member of his choir, were found dead together, murdered, under an old crabapple tree on an abandoned farm, four years ago.

The case was abandoned, almost forgotten, when, suddenly, at midnight, on information supplied by the New York Mirror, the police took Mrs. Hall to prison.

THE AUTHORITIES will decide her case. Millions of women will discuss the provocation that led to the crime, if the accused widow is convicted. The murder was based on revenge and hatred evidently and accomplished with skill and secrecy. The accused woman's order to her lawyers is, "Fight, fight," and millions of women, who know what jealousy and its tortures are, hope that she will win her fight and prove her innocence.

ONLY WOMEN know what that wife, now a widow, went through, what tortures she endured, as she watched her husband in the evening walk out through the gate of their

JURY GETS 8 COAKLEY ISSUES

The $500,000 suit of Mrs. Oda Pappathanos against Daniel H. Coakley went to the jury at 11:16 today in Superior Court on eight new issues framed at the eleventh hour by agreement of all parties.

The jury was called upon to express opinions on many details of the case instead of merely passing on the general question as to whether Coakley made fraudulent misrepresentations to Mrs. Pappathanos, his former client, in regard to the settlement he made of her love suit against wealthy "Mr. Blank."

When the jurors began deliberations in the jury room they learned for the first time from the official papers in the case, the true name of the mysterious "Mr. Blank," a Maine manufacturer, who was shielded from publicity during the trial.

Judge Lummus said in his charge to the jury:

"Your consideration must be free from personalities, appeals to emotion, sensation and harangue of a political variety.

"You must first eliminate certain considerations. It is not for you to determine whether Oda Pappathanos is a good woman or whether Daniel H Coakley is good man we are not concerned with the character of the parties except as it appears on their testimony on the stand.

"I suppose, gentlemen, that in

GIRL, 17, SHOT CLEANING GUN

Vera Barnes 17, inmate of the Waverley School for the Feeble Minded is in a critical condition at the Massachusetts General Hospital victim of an accidental shooting when she was cleaning her father's gun.

The girl was on a vacation from the Waverley School, and the near tragedy occurred at the home of Clifford Barnes, her father, No. [illegible] Page street, Stoughton.

According to the story told by the girl and her father to the Stoughton police, Vera had been cleaning the house and came upon her father's gun. It was loaded and when she attempted to clean it, was discharged and a bullet lodged in the girl's breast.

Her father was awakened by her screams and hurried her in his automobile to the hospital.

At first it was feared she would die, but later reports from the hospital give assurance of the physicians she will live.

For a time there was an element of mystery surrounding the shooting, but the police were satisfied with the girl's story, three times repeated.

NEW HALL CASE ARREST LOOMS

New Brunswick, N. J., July 31 (A.P.).—Announcement today by Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson that he would run to the ground reported powerful influences which impeded solution of the Hall-Mills murder mystery four years ago, was followed by unofficial news that a new and startling arrest would be made within 48 hours.

Meanwhile calm prevailed in the mansion of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, released on $15,000 bail charged with the murder of her husband, the Rev. Edward W. Hall, and his pretty choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, whose bodies were found side by side on the deserted Phillips farm near here.

Among the townspeople, reporters and special investigators rumor chased rumor, but the prosecutor's office refused to make any definite disclosure regarding the name of the person whose arrest is regarded as imminent, nor was it revealed whether the arrest would be of a principal in the murder plot, or of a material witness.

As curious crowds passed by the house Mrs. Hall maintained her air of stoic reserve, and went about her daily routine as usual. At lunch she entertained Mrs. Paul Bonner and Mrs. Frank Voorhees, sisters of the murdered rector.

"We are very sorry for the trouble that has been brought on

NINE SHOT DOWN BY MEXICAN TROOPS IN WILD CHURCH RIOT

Mexico City, July 31.—Nine persons, mostly women, were shot and wounded today when they resisted the attempt of Federal troops to oust them from San Rafael Cathedral, one of the smaller churches in Mexico City.

The occupants of the church were first informed quietly they would have to go. When they refused, firemen were summoned, who drenched the worshippers with water from fire hose.

The reply of the crowd both within and without the church was to hurl stones and other missiles at the invaders.

The soldiers then intervened and, returning bullets for stones, succeeded in dispersing the crowd.

Attorney-General Romeo Ortega, it was reported, was struck in the head by a bottle wielded by a woman. The report was not confirmed.

Soldiers also had to be called to clear the neighboring aristocratic Church of the Sacred Family, located in the Colonia Roma, where many Americans reside. No casualties were reported there, however.

Nearly a score of injured and 72 under arrest are the results of the first riotings in connection with the closing of the catholic churches, in protest against the Mexican Government's religious regulations. Riotnig occurred at four churches during the early hours of the morning.

Thirty-five men and seven women are held for trial for rioting at San Rafael Church. Two mounted police were seriously injured, perhaps fatally, when they attempted to clear a crowd away from the Bortolomeo De Las Casas Church. Twenty-five

COURT MOVE MADE TO BLOCK DEMPSEY FIGHT

Denver, July 31 (A.P.).—Another chapter was written in the negotiations for the projected Dempsey-Tunney bout in September, when Granby Hillyer, acting for B. C. Clements of Chicago filed application in Federal Court for an injunction restraining the champion from engaging in any bout before meeting Harry Wills, negro challenger.

Citing the contract that he claims to hold requiring the champion to meet the negro challenger Clements asks that Dempsey be restrained from engaging in any bouts involving his title before squaring off in the ring with Wills.

The papers were served on Dempsey at his Colorado Springs training camp and brought forth response from Eugene Normile, Dempsey's representative, who charged Clements with making another attempt to "get publicity at Dempsey's expense." He characterized the court action trivial and said that while Dempsey would respect the court order requiring an answer in twenty days, it would not interfere with his plans to leave here Sunday for Saratoga Lake, N. Y., where he will complete training for the Tunney bout.

Dempsey said he would consult an attorney and would have an announcement to make soon.

Randolph, N. H., July 31.—On a snow and wind-swept crag half-way up the side of Mt. Washington an epic of threatened death and heroic rescue that out-thrills the "thriller" of the silver screen was enacted early today.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace B. Hand of Camden, N. J., played the chief roles in the drama that was only saved from tragedy by the courage and resourcefulness of a group of Boston men.

The Jersey couple had started up the Tuckerman trail with a group of tourists yesterday. But when they reached last night's stopping place Mr. and Mrs. Hand felt so confident of their own strength they decided to go adventuring alone and common with most right-minded men, you consider that a blackmailer, male or female, or whether acting as an attorney for such a party who turns into cash the weaknesses, sins and fears of a man, with the threatened disgrace and humiliation of his family, is the lowest creature permitted to bear human form.

COAKLEY CASE GOES TO JURY

"We are not concerned here with whether Oda Pappathanos had a legitimate cause of action against Mr. Blank, or whether Mr. Coakley thought she had.

"The first question at issue asks you to determine what Mr. Coakley actually received. The plaintiff urges you to say $150,000 and the defendant urges $20,000. You have heard the testimony of Mr. Treat. It appears by a check, Exhibit 5, that Mr. Blank drew a check for $150,000, which was endorsed by him and cashed, the proceeds being brought back to Mr. Treat.

"Treat and Blank brought it to Attorney Baker, it was turned over to Baker, and on Treat's testimony you heard that the amount of money was $150,000. If you find that $180,000 of this disappeared, upon the evidence, you might be justified in eliminating everybody but Coakley and Baker. Coakley says he got $20,000 and no more. Who got the $130,000.

"FORGERY" QUESTIONS

"A receipt is in evidence bearing the name Daniel H. Coakley. Experts agree it is a traced signature. Who traced it or caused it to be traced? There is evidence that both Exhibit 1, signed by Mrs. Pappathanos, and Exhibit 4, the disputed signature, were written on the same paper and on the same typewriter.

"These were written in Mr. Baker's office according to all testimony as I remember it. If Baker was forging a receipt drawn in his office would he have left the date blank? Or would he have written the date on the typewriter rather than with a pen, thus laying himself less open to detection?

"On the other hand, would Mr. Baker turn over $150,000 to Mr. Coakley on a case like this while Mr. Coakley agreed to obtain a release from his client? Or would he rather tell Coakley he had the $150,000 and turn it over when the release was brought to his office?

"Mr. Coakley says that when he brought back the release, Baker gave him $20,000. The burden of proof in this issue is on the plaintiff.

"As to whether Mr. Coakley paid the plaintiff's husband $3,000, let me say that he had no right to pay this to her husband without her consent. The burden of proof is on Mr. Coakley to show whether he made any payment to the husband."

The jurors were not asked to fix a monetary award if any, as the suit is not an ordinary civil action. It was a case in equity and determination of any sum in award rests with the presiding judge.

Coakley was charged by Mrs. Pappathanos with settling for $150,000 her action against the Maine man, but reporting to her that he collected only $6,200.

EIGHT ISSUES

The eight issues submitted to the jury were in effect as follows:

What amount of money did Coakley receive from Mr. Blank or his attorney in settlement of Mrs. Pappathanos' claim, apart from $7,000 that Mr. Blank paid direct to Mrs. Pappathanos?

What amount, apart from the $7,000, did he report to Mrs. Pappathanos?

Did Coakley, with intent to defraud, misrepresent the sum received?

Did he conceal the amount from her from March 2 6or 27, 1918, to some time within six yeasr next preceding commencement of this suit?

Did Coakley and Mrs. Pappathanos agree orally that he should receive one-half the net amount of the settlement for his services?

Did she consent that, in the final accounting, the $7,000 should be considered as part of the settlement of her claim against Mr. Blank?

Did she authorize him to pay $3,000 to her husband or his attorney, for a release to Mr. Blank?

Did he pay the $3,000 for such release?

HUB MEN SAVE 2 IN SNOWSLIDE

seek to make the rest of the climb on their own

They dared the steep breaks of the Tuckerman trail despite the warning of the more experienced mountain climbers

Halfway up the shaggy side of the mountain they heard an ominous roar that would have been the signal for flight to more accustomed mountaineers.

Then the great mass of snow and ice swept them down Tuckerman's ravine with the suddenness of a lightning bolt. Hand was just able to seize his wife as they were whirled downward to what seemed sure death.

A hardy mountain bush, that withstood the force of the avalanche, offered its aid, and Mr. Hand seized it with one hand as he supported his fainting wife. He held to it while the snowslide swept over and past them

Then he found they were on a crag that just jutted out from the mountain side, with little chance of escape.

A guide, Joe Dodge, spied the two far up on the mountain side, and he enlisted the aid of a party of Boston men, Phillip Coolidge and Ludwig Geiscope, Arnold Belcher, W. S. Ross and Arnold Percival.

By forming a human chain these men lowered the lightest of their number down to the couple, and both were dragged to safety.

Mrs. Hand was immediately taken to the hospital at Conway, her husband suffered only cuts and bruises.

EAST BOSTON MEN ARRESTED IN RUM CASE

St. Albans, Vt., July 31 (A.P.).—Trying to fulfill his brother's contract for a load of contraband wet goods led to the arrest, at Newport, of John Renihan of Chelsea street, East Boston, and his companion, John Walsh of Bennington street.

Renihan's new automobile seized with thirteen cases of ale, was brought here this morning and Collector Whitehill ordered the ale destroyed and the car converted to customs use.

HALL'S SISTERS BACK WIDOW

Mrs. Hall," Mrs. Bonner said, "and are only too glad that she has been released. We are firmly convinced that she knows nothing about the crime."

The only statement issued from the Hall home announced that Mrs. Hall would not leave New Brunswick before the meeting of the Grand Jury, which probably will be convened the third Tuesday in September.

As the luncheon guests were leaving to return to their homes, expressing their assurance the charges would bep roven false, Colonel Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, announced hew as positive his men had a strong case against the widow.

"The troopers, who have been working on the case four years, have been under instructions not to take definite action and not make any arrests until they had obtained airtight evidence," he said.

dropped out of sight on that date, returning July 29.

Officials here were informed the two men were unable to give a satisfactory account of the two days in question after they were taken into custody.

State police today visited Cambridge and Chelsea to check up known thugs in the hunt for the train robbers who got away with $6[illegible],000.

A number of underworld characters were looked up, and particular attention was made to several Chelsea men who it is said recently participated in hi-jacking operations.

At the same time Chief of Police Charles R. Scott of Amesbury was in Canada following a lead furnished by Chief Arthur Field of the Maine State police.

William A. Jordan of Beverly, baggage-master on the shuttle train, who was held at bay by the robbers while they selected the mail sacks and made their getaway, accompanied the State police to Cambridge and Chelsea, where he looked over the local Rogues' Galleries.

The search in and about Newburyport, which has been prosecuted ever since the robbery, was practically abandoned.

Chief of Police Charles R. Scott of Amesbury reached Canada early today.

Chief Scott left suddenly on receipt of information which the investigating authorities would not divulge, although admitting it had considerable to do with the train robbery. It was something in the case which needed immediate investigation in Canada, the authorities said.

READING DENIES NAMING LERNER

Morris Lerner of No. 742 Cambridge street, Cambridge, was indignant today as a result of a statement given out yesterday in connection with the Salisbury mail robbery.

Newspapers, including the Boston Evening American, were informed that District Attorney Arthur K. Reading had declared he believed three men, one of them Lerner, had committed the robbery.

The newspapers were told the statement was made by Reading in broadcasting a request to all police that the three men be arrested on sight for the murder of Edward C. Ross in the Ward Baking Company payroll holdup last September.

On reading the statements in the newspapers, Lerner hurried to the home of Lieut. Inspector Thomas F. Coady of the Cambridge police and asked if he was wanted. Coady replied he knew nothing of it, but suggested Lerner see Capt. Patrick J. Hurley, chief inspector at headquarters.

This Lerner did, to receive the same answer. Capt. Hurley said he knew nothing of any indictment against Lerner or any reason why the authorities should wish to talk with him.

Inspector Coady quoted the Cambridge man as saying he had been in Cambridge constantly, and had never been questioned by the police. The inspector corroborated this statement.

When the matter was called to his attention today, District Attorney Reading denied he made the statement credited to him.

"I never gave out the statement," said Reading. "It was given to the newspapers by Charles E. Folsom, an indictment clerk in my office. I knew nothing about Lerner's name being used."

The newspapers naturally assumed when the message was received from Reading's office that it was given out with his knowledge and approval.

DON JUAN GETS TWO MONTHS IN JAIL

Edward A. Ross, sailor Don Juan, courted and won Julia P. Horrigan, beauty known as "Miss Dorchester," say the police, evidently forgetting that Mrs. Ross and two little Rosses were every day expecting the return of their sea-going father in Norfolk, Va.

Ross was found guilty in municipal court today of falsifying names on his marriage intention papers.

Only yesterday he had a day in court in Dorchester, where he was charged with non-support of Wife [illegible] Horrigan, and his marrying hobby was discovered, according to the police.

Joseph Cohalan of the registrar's office at City Hall said that on the intention papers Ross filed on October 29, 1921, he gave his age as 22 though in reality he was born February 10, 1894. He said he had been previously married, but was divorced, but there is no record of any divorce. He said he was born in Walpole, when, actually, according to Cohalan, he was born on L street, South Boston.

Ross was sentenced to two months in the House of Correction, which he appealed.

PARIS SHAKEN BY QUAKE

Paris, July 31 (A.P.)—Paris and the whole of west France, from Havre to L'Orient, experienced a small earthquake last night.

With the exception of a tall chimney, which collapsed at Coutainville and the breaking of crockery, no damage was done.

The tremors were accompanied at some places with deep rumblings. The weather was fine and the sea calm at the time.

St. Herlier, Jersey, English Channel Islands, July 31 (A.P.).—Two further slight earthshocks were felt here today, but no damage is reported. Large buildings were rocked several seconds by a quake yesterday and several chimneys collapsed.

OLIVE WILSON, BEAUTY, NOT MISSING, SAYS SISTER

Miss Olive Wilson, former Boston beauty prize winner, who was requested through a magazine advertisement to write to an Uxbridge youth, did not "vanish mysteriously" from the home of her married sister in Roxbury, according to information received today by this newspaper, and the Boston Evening American regrets having made this assertion under a picture of Miss Wilson. She is living in Westfield, where she has been employed for two months, according to her sister, and has no intention of going on the stage, as intimated in another statement.

TWO ALIENISTS TO EXAMINE DEVEREAUX

A new move in the fight for the lives of the three carbarn bandits, condemned to the electric chair, came today when two eminent Boston alienists visited the death house at Charlestown State prison to examine John J. Devereaux as to his sanity.

The doctors, Miner Evans and I. Green, are widely known mental experts, and they were retained by Devereaux' father after a conference with Atty. Francis Juggins, who is handling the triple fight for life.

The senior Devereaux firmly believes his son is mentaly unsound and he was of the same weak mental calibre at the time of the carbarn murder.

After their examination the doctors will report their findings to Attorney Juggins, and he, in turn, will detail it to Governor Fuller and his council at the meeting on Tuesday.

At this meeting, which is the last hope of the condemned trio, every relative of the three will be present, the family groups being led by the three mothers.

A touch of additional pathos will be lent to the hearing when little Jackie and Helen McLaughlin, children of John J. McLaughlin, appear.

Meanwhile, those to appear personally before the Governor are being selected by the Clemency Committee and will include a rabbi, priest, minister, prominent Boston business men, the three mothers, and other representatives of the committee. Petitions bearing thousands of names urging clemency will be presented to the Governor.

Secretary Manning and Attorney Juggins will clean up today on the final arrangements preparatory to their hearing before the Governor. Workers are redoubling their efforts to increase the number of names to be presented.

BUNCO RING FOE SLAIN IN HOTEL AMBUSH

Atlanta, Ga., July 31 (A.P.).—Efforts of Bert Donaldson, special prosecutor for the county solicitor-general, to rid Atlanta of a million-dollar "bunco" ring several years ago, and his subsequent persistence in tracking down Jack Wilson, wanted for murder, are believed by police to have led to his slaying in a fashionable hotel here Thursday night.

Donaldson was found dead with two shotgun wounds in his head and back.

Solicitor-General John A. Boykin last night advanced the theory that gunmen had been imported from Chicago by the local criminal element.

AMBUSHED IN HOTEL.

The investigator left his home Thursday night in response to a telephone call, according to his wife. Alarmed at his failure to return Friday morning, she notified detectives, who found the body.

Investigation disclosed the detective had been ambushed in the hotel room. The position of the body and the presence of a chair in clothes closet in the room indicated that the slayer waited there for his victim and fired without warning. Donaldson was unarmed.

Employes of the hotel reported hearing two shots fired about the time Donaldson is believed to have been killed. The detective is also reported to have been seen about the hotel Thursday night with three men, none of whom were known to hotel employes.

WAS MAIL ROBBER.

Investigation of Donaldson's police record showed he once served a one-year sentence in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary in connection with the robbery of a postoffice. He pleaded guilty to the crime following his capture in Milwaukee. He also was arrested following the $300,000 mail robbery at Rochester, N. Y., for which "Dutch" Anderson, associate of Gerald Chapman, was originally sentenced to Atlanta. Donaldson was released.

After coming to Atlanta, Donaldson renounced his criminal life, was ordained to the ministry and began his work of prison reform.

Milton's tax rate took a jump of $4 over the rate of last year, making it $27.80, the highest in the history of the town, it was announced today. The increase is caused by larger appropriations, amounting to $832,930, although real estate and personal property valuation took a decided jump.

HUB MAN'S BRIDE IS ENGLISH VISITOR

Owner of the Commonwealth Ave. Apartments Named in Actress' $150,000 Action

Robert M. Dobbins of Beacon street, once sued for $150,000 by a motion picture actress and later rebuked by the Commission on the Necessaries of Life for charging excessive rents, again leaped into the limelight today by eloping to New York with an English society girl.

His bride is Agnes Kathryn Webster of Sheffield, Eng., who has been making her home with a Brookline family. News of the elopement reached Henry Dobbins, brother of Robert, in a telegram which read:

"Just married, 8 o'clock, St. Paul's Chapel, Trinity Church."

Henry Dobbins said he had dinner with the couple last night, and had no suspicion of their intention to elope a few hours afterward.

Robert Dobbins was the defendant in a breach of promise suit brought by "Peggy" Grace, a film actress, who later is said to have attempted suicide while despondent. The case was never brought to trial.

As owner of Commonwealth avenue apartment houses Dobbins was complained of to the Commission on the Necessaries of Life, which decided his reasons for raising rents were not satisfactory, but withheld final judgment.

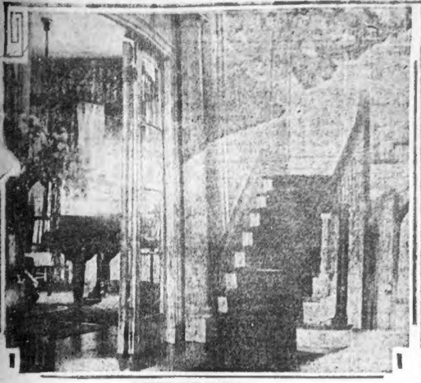
"GLAN-Y-MOR," NORTH SCITUATE RESIDENCE OF THE GEORGE HAWLEYS, IS FAMOUS FOR ITS RAMBLER ROSES



INTERIOR VIEW

SUMMERTIME PICTURE

RIOT OF BRILLIANT BLOSSOMS

MISTRESS OF MANSE
Mrs. Hawley is a lover of nature and art patron.

Society Watching Tennis on Essex County Courts

SOCIETY'S RENDEZVOUS SUPREME WAS (AS IT IS AT the moment, also) the comfortably pretentious Essex County Club and its tennis courts. Local smart set net stars and visitors of fame from afar vied for honors, before a succession of galleries that include all the "Who's Who" of several counties.

MISS BETTY BEAL, just back from London and wearing an up-to-the-moment sports frock of new-leaf-green pleated crepe, Miss Theodora Ayer in white, Miss Anne Ayer in white banded with yellow and Miss Frances Weld, in cornflower, each is a tennis devotee.

YOUNG MATRONS of the tennis set when not appearing on the courts were attentive spectators—Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer in tan with broad chapeau from which swung a length of filmy veiling; Mrs. William Endicott in all-white; Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard (over from Tedesco's matches) in black and white.

PETITE AND LOVELY Mrs. "Bob" Choate, smart member of the social-politico set, in faint blue, Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman in figured crepe, Mrs. John K. Howard in black and white of swirling design, Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer in yellow, watched the various matches.

IN FACT, SOCIETY from Nahant to the furthermost stretches of the shore attended and children were everywhere—the Bayard Tuckerman youngsters, Mrs. William Gordon Means' dainty little daughter, Nancy; the "Freddy" Ayer hopefuls and ever so many others.

MRS. THOMAS E. P. RICE, a dainty figure in wide shady hat and figured silk, slenderly fashioned and smartly executed, had her little son of tender years with her. The Francis P. Sears children, golden-haired little girls like enormous dolls, were pretty as could be.

A NEWPORT BELLE at the North Shore for the week-end is Miss Edith Woodward, daughter of the William Woodwards of New York and "The Cloisters," Newport, and niece of Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames. Miss Woodward is house guest of Miss Theodora Ayer at "Juniper Ridge" in Hamilton.

"JUNIPER RIDGE," with the Charles Fanning Ayers as hosts, is housing a merry group this week-end. And if Old Sol is kind tomorrow they take a large party away for a picnic, an all-day affair down the shore.

DINNERS AND HOUSE dances also figure on the week-end program, with day hours devoted almost wholly to sports, particularly riding about Hamilton's lovely woodland trails. Miss Theodora and Miss Anne Ayer are two of the Smart Set's most accomplished riders.

DEBUTANTES of the same Winter, and each presented in super-brilliant manner, Miss Ayer and Miss Woodward are school girl friends, and have traveled abroad together. Miss Ayer is but recently back from Newport as a Woodward guest.

A MIDNIGHT SAILING of the giant Leviathan interests Boston's upper set, with a distinguished representation. The Hugh Ogdens (to whom grandparent honors have lately come) are sailing for the late Summer abroad.

MRS. JOHN T. WHEELWRIGHT goes over on the big American liner, likewise Mrs. Charles A. Loring and her son, John A. Loring, who made a flying trip and came back in a few weeks on the Mauretania.

ROBERT TREAT PAINE, 2d, is a Leviathan passenger when she pulls out from her New York dock at midnight. Dr. Philip D. Nelson goes to join his family, and John J. Barry is outbound, for a short stay in England.

TOMORROW WHEN the Samaria docks in Boston she brings home Professor Joseph Warren. A Boston debarkation is always interesting, and many Bostonians prefer to come back thus, landing on home shores but a short motor trip from their own establishments.

COUNTLESS RAMBLER ROSES, of bright pink and deep rich red, glorify "Glan-y-mor," the North Scituate Summer home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hawley of Chestnut street. Beauty lovers and floriculturalists from everywhere make the journey to view the roses, just now in the heyday of their Summer blooming.

THEY CLAMBER ALL over the Collier house (an ancient Scituate landmark boasting the hoary age of two hundred and fifty years) in the Hawley estate. They swing from arches and trellises in the formal garden, cover much of the villa itself and make a bright cordon of color all about the grounds.

AS USUAL MR. AND MRS. HAWLEY are interesting themselves in the South Shore's musical life—and the musicales in which Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sheridan figure so prominently. Patrons of the grand opera season, and hosts at Winter musicales of much distinction, Mr. and Mrs. Hawley hold high place in the set devoted to the muse.

MRS. WILSON SAILING FOR TRIP TO EUROPE

New York, July 31 (A.P.)—Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, widow of President Wilson, will sail for Europe tonight on the Leviathan accompanied by her brother, Richard W. Bolling of Washington. Mrs. Wilson will attend the assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva, in September. She will also spend some time in England.

AIMEE ATTACKS RADIO MAN

Los Angeles, July 31 (I.N.S.)—Aimee Semple McPherson's defense forces today had definitely broken with Kenneth G. Ormiston, missing Angelus Temple radio operator.

Attorney R. R. Wooley, representing the evangelist, issued a statement to which he attached a preface stating he "feels certain" Ormiston has knowledge of her kidnaping.

Until today Mrs. McPherson's lawyers have maintained anything but an unfriendly attitude toward Ormiston and Mrs. McPherson has made a public appeal for him to return and tell where he was and who was with him during the time the district attorney's office claims he was at Carmel-by-the-Sea with a woman witnesses say resembled the evangelist.

FORD 'AIR TOT' IS BIG SUCCESS

Detroit, Mich., July 31 (A.P.)—After producing and distributing more than 14,000,000 of his famous automobiles, Henry Ford has come to the front with an "air flivver."

Rumors of experiments with a baby airplane were confirmed when the noted industrialist gave a successful demonstration of the tiny monoplane.

The demonstration, Ford officials were careful to point out, does not as yet herald entrance of the company into mass production in the light plane field. Although admitting enthusiasm over the prospects of the [illegible] they declare the project is [illegible].

Designed by Otto Kappen, young German, the little plane is powered by a three-cylinder air-cooled motor. The pilot sits about midway of the wing, which is placed along the top of the fusilage. It has a wing spread of 22 feet, is 15 feet long and weighs 350 pounds. The motor, turning over at 1,600 revolutions a minute, gives a top speed of about 85 miles an hour.

DEMOCRATS ON OUTING TODAY

That big noise from down Nahant way this afternoon and evening will be the echoes of the merrymaking by Democrats of Massachusetts on their annual outing at the Bass Point House.

More than 600 strong, they were scheduled to congregate for a shore and steak dinner this afternoon, to be followed by speeches by prominent State and national figures in the Democratic party ranks, and after that dancing until midnight for all who wish to disport in the ballroom.

A business meeting of the State committee, under the guidance of Chairman Charles H. McGlue, will precede the funmaking.

Jessel to Film Play He Gives in Hub

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 31—If you do not think George Jessel is regarded by Warner Brothers in the light of a 1926 find, listen to this piece of news. Ernst Lubitsch will direct him in "The Jazz Singer." If you will permit me to express myself let me say this, arrangement is one that is highly agreeable to both actor and director.

The only fly in the ointment right now, however, is an engagement Jessel has in Boston, August 15, to appear before the footlights in "The Jazz Singer." This precludes all chance of bringing it to the screen before May.

G. B. Shaw

Jessel regrets this previous engagement but not so much as Lubitsch, who is frantically searching for a play to follow "So This is Paris." And just to emphasize Warner Brothers' partiality to Jessel let me tell about the new contract which calls for two more pictures upon the completion of "The Jazz Singer." One of these will be "After All," an original story by the popular young actor himself.

While at the Warner studios I had a talk with Lubitsch on satire on the screen.

"The greatest writer of the present day is George Bernard Shaw," said Lubitsch, "and he is a satirist. In motion pictures we are not ready for satire. We believe the highest artistic development is in the heavy drama and that comedy is not of the same importance."

This, Mr. Lubitsch believes, is an erroneous idea and one that should be corrected. Successful satire, he feels, is the highest demonstration of art.

GEORGE O'BRIEN IS WEARING A BANDAGE on his head at the Fox studios and it is not a part of the props in "A Trip To Tilsit," either. It is the result of a plank falling on his head and cutting it while he was having a test made for F. W. Murnau, Fox's new German director.

Neither Herr Murnau nor George are superstitious so they are not letting the accident worry them, although six stitches were necessary to close the gash which George hopes will not show in the picture. "A Trip To Tilsit" will make its bow under the more descriptive title, "The Song of Two Humans."

Marguerite Livingstone is also featured in Murnau's first American picture, which in view of his direction in "The Last Laugh" is being awaited with great expectations.

PAULINE STARRE HAS BEEN PERSUADED that after all westerns are not so bad when they are to be presented on an elaborate scale.

For several weeks she held out against this type of play but now she is quite convinced that she will have a chance in a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer de luxe Wild West films which are being produced under the supervision of Colonel Tim McCoy.

Pauline is slated to appear in "San Francisco Sal" a little later and she says she doesn't mind being a western "Gal" in the interim.

EVERYTHING IS ALL SET AND READY TO GO in the Milton Sills picture at the Associated First National studios. But the cameras are silent, waiting for Nathalie Kingston, the leading lady, whose illness makes it impossible for her to report for duty.

Everyone at the studio is hoping she will make a quick recovery and overcome the threatened pneumonia. Mr. Sills is waiting for her in the hope that a few days' rest will put her right, and able to resume work.

MARION DAVIES CAN RECOMMEND TENNIS as a way to keep healthy and thin. She has been playing every day during her vacation between pictures and now swings a mean racquet and keeps her opponents busy.

Marion herself laughs at her game and says that Helen Wills would weep if she could see her, but her friends are more complimentary.

Marion Davies

ONCE IN A WHILE WE DO GET OUR MOVIES MIXED. It seems that Reed Howes is the lead in "Wings of the Storm" while "William Russell is to play the heavy.

Russell has plenty of experience doing villaining on the screen, and far be it from me to accuse him of being the hero when he is supposed to be the villain and far be it from me not to give Mr. Howes his just dues.

THOSE WHO HAVE READ "THE MAN NOBODY KNOWS" in the Hearst newspapers will be interested to know Bruce Barton, the author, will reach here today.

As I stated in this column a few days ago he came in response to an offer made to him by Jesse Lasky, but his first screen work will be supervising "King of Kings," the Cecil de Mille Biblical spectacle.

Mr. Barton's particular work is, as I understand it, in an editorial capacity.

EDWIN JUSTUS MAYER IS NOT LETTING his laurels as the author of "The Firebrand" keep him from writing for the screen. In fact he is busy every day, getting acquainted with the exigencies (a five dollar word) of the drama.

He has just sold "His Brother's Keeper" to Universal for Reginald Denny and is now concentrating on another scenario, the name and purpose of which he is not divulging.

MORGAN NIECE TO WED INGALLS

New York, July 31 (A.P.)—Miss Mabel Morgan Satterlee, a niece of J. P. Morgan and Miss Anne Morgan, is to be married to Francis Abbott Ingalls, Jr.

No date for the wedding was named in announcements by Miss Satterlee's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, of New York and Greenwich, Ct.

Miss Satterlee made her debut in 1920, and is the elder of two daughters. She is a member of the Junior League Club.

Mr. Ingalls is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Abbott Ingalls of New York, is a Harvard graduate, a member of the Merchants' Club, and served in the World War. He is a grandson of David H. Houghtaling, prominent tea merchant, and a director of the United States Life Insurance Company.

A. A. A. DECLARES AGAINST COMPULSORY INSURANCE

Washington, July 31 (A.P.)—Compulsory automobile liability insurance, advocated in many parts of the United States as a means to promote safety, is opposed by the American Automobile Association.

In a statement today the association said an investigation of several years had led it to the conclusion that such compulsory insurance "would breed recklessness rather than promote greater care," and subject the "car owners in mass to a burden of $300,000,000 in compulsory premiums to provide protection against a comparatively few motorists who are financially irresponsible."

NEW SUB DELIVERED TO PERU GOVERNMENT

Groton, Ct., July 31 (A.P.)—A new 800-ton submarine, the R-2, was delivered to the government of Peru today by the Electric Boat Company of New ork. The vessel was received by Commander Enrique Monge, flotilla commander of the submarine division, on behalf of his government. The R-2 was built at the plant of the New London Ship & Engine Company at Groton and was launched on April 29, last.

Smokes at 100 and Enjoys 12 Great Grandchildren

New York, July 31 (A.P.).—August Achilles of Staten Island has rounded out an even 100 years, acquired four children, ten grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren, but enjoys a good pipe full of tobacco as much as a younger man.

More than 1,000 friends attended a birthday celebration in his honor yesterday. He came from Germany, became a citizen in 1850, cast his first vote for Buchanan, and voted twice for Lincoln. His hobbies are automobile rides and the movies.

BARONESS LEAPS TO HER DEATH IN MIAMI HOTEL

Miami, Fla., July 31 (A.P.).—The woman who leaped to her death from the eighteenth floor of the Everglades Hotel was identified today by police as Baroness Royce-Garrett, known to the Miami music and social world as Vera Lavrova.

She obtained her title when she married Baron Royce-Garrett. The baron was of English descent but inherited the baronetcy created for his great grandfather who served as equerry, or gentleman-in-waiting, to Peter the Great.

FALSE TEETH IN GULLET KILL NEW HAVEN MAN

New Haven, July 31 (A.P.).—Felix O'Brien, a bricklayer, died at a hospital here from pneumonia superinduced, it was stated today, by conditions internaly due to his having swallowed two false teeth and bridgework. Death came as a surgeon was about to operate to recover the teeth which had lodged in the gullet. The man had told the physician he forgot to remove them one night when he retired and missed them next morning.

Traveler Dead

Worcester, July 31.—William H. Savage, 82, Worcester lumber king and civic leader, is dead. His hobby was 'round-the-world trips. He had made six.

CUMMINS, IOWA SENATOR, DEAD

Des Moines, Ia., July 31 (A.P.)—Senator Albert B. Cummins of Des Moines, a factor in Iowa Republican politics thirty-nine years, died here of heart disease on the eve of his retirement from public life after eighteen years in the United States Senate. He was seventy-six years old.

His death puts Senator Norris of Nebraska in line for the judiciary chairmanship of the Senate.

Under Iowa law Governor John Hammill will name a successor, who will serve until the expiration of the term next March. The governor, now on a tour in the West, stated the appointment would not be announced until after the funeral.

Senator Cummins first won recognition in Iowa politics as a leader of the "progressive" element, but in later years he was known and sometimes criticized for his important part in obtaining such national legislation as the Clayton Act and the Transportation Act of 1920.

Coolidge Deplores Death of Senator

White Pines Camp, N. Y., July 31 (I.N.S.).—President Coolidge today sent the following message to Miss Margaret Cummins, over the death of her brother, Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa:

"It is with a sense of personal bereavement that I offer you my sympathy in the death of Senator Cummins. It is a great loss not only to the people of the State and section which he so ably represented, but to the country at large.

"While his name is particularly associated with the tariff and transportation policies embodied in the laws now in force, he gave the benefit of his long experience and thorough training in every branch of legislation. Courageous, able and industrious, and devoted to what he believed to be right, he was an example of the best type of public servant."

CEMENT IN COLORS NEW WALL COVER

By IRVING M. PHILLIPS,
N. E. Distributor of Morene Products

Morene is the new factor in the Home Beautiful.

Few there are who associate beautiful and richly colored mural decorations with the thought of Portland cement. The chemist, the artist and the scientist, combining the technique of their arts, have now, however, raised the monotonous cement of durable utility to illimitable iridescent beauty as a decorative factor in the home.

Brilliant reds, vivid greens, rich blues, the whole range of colors, boldly and artistically blended to make the new Wall beautiful in the Home Beautiful, are within the reach of all through the newly invented wall decorative substance—Morene.

Morene is an emulsion. It is composed of White Portland cement, sand and asbestos. The ingredients are so combined that they remain in suspension.

Not alone the vivid hues but also delicate pastel shades and pure, brilliant white are colorings possible through the use of the new product.

Owing to the unusual combination of White Portland cement with the oils and chemicals in the making of Morene, an dthe addition of color pigments, the wall decorations of Morene have a peculiar softness of tone.

Their striking feature is that they lack the sheen common to ordinary paints and pigments.

As a result light reflections do not mar their effect and the decorations may be viewed from any angle with full appreciation of the color tones and values.

Morene has many practical advantages also. It may be applied with a brush or a spatula to any brown or white plaster surface. It may be used on wood, metal or old painted surfaces or on any wallboard. Most important of all, it may be washed and scrubbed with soap and water and it does not crack or check.

Especially is it fine for securing Travertine stone effects and rough textural finishes in any color combination.

Morene is, indeed, the new decorative medium in the Home Beautiful, combining the permanency of concrete with the utmost in artistic expression.

FUMIGANT IS FACTOR IN CLEAN HOUSE

By DR. HARRY W. HOUGHTON,
President Safety Fumigant Co.

Modern sanitation under the present living conditions necessitates more effective means of maintaining health than heretofore known to check the spread of disease germs and disease carrying vermin, which prey upon health and vitality.

With this in mind the writer has devoted years of study to make practicable new sanitation processes, which find the vermin and disease germs in the most hidden places within the home and destroy them.

The process would naturally involve the use of gas, as safe as formaldehyde or sulphur, but more effective than anything else known at present, for its penetrating powers must allow it to reach vermin where liquids and powders do not give results. In addition to destroying disease germs, moths, rats, mice, bedbugs, corkroaches, fleas and insects in general, its use must not damage metals, fine fabrics or foodstuffs.

GREAT ANNUAL DAMAGE.

As a matter of information, moths cause $200,000,000 worth of damage annually. Rats and mice are destructive to the extent of $167,000,000 and are also extremely dangerous, for the bite of the flea off these rodents very often spread bubonic plague. Cockroaches carry various disease germs on their bodies and infect food and water supplies, with which they come in contact.

The bed bug is another disease germ carrier, which preys upon infants as well as adults and transfers disease germs, depending on the health of the various victims. If these germs and vermin gain entrance to our homes, it is practically impossible to get clear of them unless something is used which will penetrate every crack and crevice for there is where they hide. The writer has perfected the Safti-Fume Service, which involves the use of Safti-Fume, which spreads itself, brings the germs, insects and rodents from their hiding places and kills them. The process, as perfected, has been used on thousands of steamships, schooners, yachts, railroad cars, hotels, stores warehouses commissaries, graneries and homes without the slightest damage to metals, fine fabrics or food stuffs. As for results, it has been found effective, where powders, sprays and all other methods have failed.

Safti-Fume Service employs experienced crews, which are thoroughly trained to handle any size job from a davenport, a room, complete house to a large storehouse or the largest steamship afloat. If you have a problem on your hands, communicate with the Safety Fumigant Company, 73 Long Wharf, and our Sanitary Engineer will call without charge and explain in detail how Safti-Fume is used.

ADD SECTION TO B. & M. FLIER

The Lucerne-in-Maine special will run as the first section of the Pine Tree Limited today. Its destination is Bangor, its passengers constituting a private party of 200 people who will visit Lucerne-in-Maine, New England's new big development.

Sunday, the Lucerne-in-Maine special will leave the Lucerne-In-Maine station at 2 p. m. on its return to Boston, running as an individual train, it was stated by the railroad.

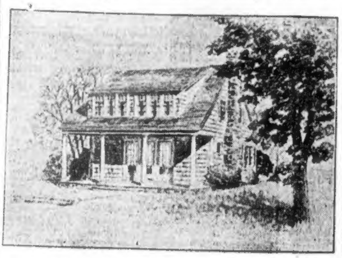
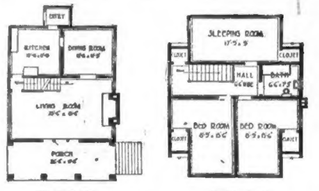
A Gray Shingled House of Many Windows





Many windows, a broad porch, an airy sleeping room and a large living room are interesting features of this house with long, low sloping roofs. Equally attractive and in place is this home in the city suburb or in the country.

The plan which is somewhat unusual shows that entrance door of the house at the center of the porch is flanked by large French windows. At one end of the living room is a fireplace which can be appropriately built of stone as well as of brick. Both the kitchen and dining room are of good size. The bed rooms and sleeping room are conveniently arranged.

Plans and information regarding this house may be obtained by communicating with William J. L. Roop, Engineer-Builder, 294 Washington St., Boston.

PLAN WIRING FOR UTILITY

By W. G. HOLLAND
Holland Electric Construction Co.

In planning the lighting system and outlets for electrical appliances, the home builder should visualize the completed home. He should make a layout of each room with pencil and paper, determining how the furniture will be arranged and where plugs for lamps will be located. Duplex receptacles are recommended where two cords may be needed for an outlet.

Above all, switches should be conveniently located, near the wood trim, and not in the centre of large plastered areas where they would be conspicuous.

Control of lights may be through a key or pull-socket at the lighting fixtures, the cheapest way, or from a wall switch, which requires additional wiring. The later method is by far the most advantageous, when cost is weighed against convenience.

Handy outlets for floor lamps and household appliances should be placed in the baseboards of all rooms except attics, where a ceiling fixture will suffice. Pantry, kitchen, laundry, bath room and bedroom always need plenty of outlets, so allowance should be made for the use of electrical appliances, washing and ironing machines, curling irons, bottle warmers, heating pads and other necessary equipment.

The modern tendency is strongly toward using plenty of convenient outlets—handy outlets making it easy to connect up any one of the dozen or more appliances and silent servants in the home electrical. It is far cheaper to install outlets when wiring, as those installed later on will entail considerably higher cost.

STONE "PATCH" ADDS BEAUTY

By J. P. FORD
Austin Ford & Son

How often an otherwise charming landscape just misses the ideal because it lacks an elusive "something."

Blue stone flagging, now handled by the Austin Ford & Son, 114 First street, Cambridge, is suggested by many landscape architects to add the finishing touch of color that gives a terrain life.

Perhaps its greatest virtue, and certainly one peculiar to this stone, is that it blends without violence to any environment—no glaring high lights, no vividly obtrusive colors—only the soft, subdued tones of old tapestries or the mellow hue of an Autumn woodland. The markings are essentially artistic and produced as only the hand of nature can produce them.

Landscape architects have found that it offers infinite possibilities for the creation of harmonious effects in the garden because of its variety of color, texture and design.

Pathways and stepping stones or simply a "patch" in some favorite shady nook produce that magic touch which gives atmosphere and charm that heretofore have been lacking.

The value of blue-stone flagging for interior flooring, terrace and floor work, is being widely recognized. In churches, conservatories, club rooms and vestibules the fascination of informal treatment cannot be better manifested.

The architectural service department of the Austin Ford and Son company is in a position to submit plans and estimates.

That important question—

"Where can I find a reputable builder?"

THERE are several reputable building contractors in Greater Boston—honest men who are experienced in house construction. The owners of the homes which these men have erected will be glad to recommend them to you.

In this class of builders we are glad to belong, but we feel that the problems of home building involve, beside construction, practical planning in sympathy with the requirements of the owners, and sound and economical financing.

Our home building service which includes these important factors of planning, constructing and financing is therefore complete; and this service is operated to your advantage and for your complete satisfaction!

Hark! the Gentle Publicist!

For Paul Oscard's new revue, "Seashore Frolics," at the "Met.," Champ Sloganeer Jeff Lazarus has his usual sharp-shooting shibboleth. Says Jeff: "Girls, bathing suits, life guards, home-blown breezes and—'Everything But The Salt Water!'"

STAGE AND SCREEN

A New Name in the Movies!

Not content with the more peaceful pursuits of a local banking business, Joseph P. Kennedy, well known Bostonian, has invaded the movie mills of Hollywood and now offers his first production in the flickering films at the Olympia next week.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE FIRST NEW VISITING DRAMA HASTENS THE END OF THE SUMMER SEASON

THEY CAN TAKE IT OR LET IT ALONE. Here you see them "taking it." Yes, little dears, film acting requires a wide range of accomplishments. Last seen, Frank Mayo was a two-handed gunman, but now, in "Lew Tyler's Wives" (State) he is a two-fisted drinker. Helen Lee Worthing helps him with the studio ginger ale. Fortunate filmsters!

VERY PRETTY, BY GEORGE! Viola Dana is just that—as you see her by George O'Hara while watching a difficult stunt in the circus film, "Bigger Than Barnum's" at the Washington Street Olympia. It's a big film, they say, with all kinds of borrowed thrills from the sawdust ring.

NO BUSINESS FOR BOBBERS with Helen Ford in "Dearest Enemy" at the Tremont. And when you consider the dainty, old-fashioned miss she is in the show, she has no need for the businesslike bobbers.

APPROPRIATING THE PROPRIETOR. In "Puppets" at the Fenway, Milton Sills owns a little show shop, but he also owns complete submission to the gorgeous Gertrude Olmstead, his "best pal, severest critic," and companion in matrimony. It's all about war, domestic and foreign, spaghetti, long and short, and music, soft and sneaky.

BRIGHT FARCE NEXT WEEK AT COPLEY

"Meet the Wife," an exceedingly right farce by Lynn Starling, will e presented at the Copley for the rst time in Boston next week. This hicle has served Mary Boland for ore than a year past on Broadway here it was rated as one of the ason's successes.

Jessamine Newcomb, well known d highly regarded by Copley patrons, will return Monday night after an absence of nearly three months, to assume the stellar role. Others in the production will be Alan Mowbray, Katherine Standing, Richard Whorf, May Ediss, Edmund George, Victor Tandy and C. Wordley Hulse.

The humorous proceedings in "Meet the Wife" hinge on a novel telephone conversation and the inability of a wife to recognize her own husband.

Following the forthcoming engagement the Copley will ring down the curtain for a brief period to make way for new carpets, decorations and other renovations—thus terminating the longest and most successful season in the history of the house. The re-opening date is announced as Saturday, September 11th.

PLAY CONTEST.

Prizes of $200, $100 and $50 are ffered by Mr. C. H. Behre on behalf of the Petit Theatre du Vieux arre of New Orleans for the best ne-act plays submitted by American writers in a contest recently nnounced. The judges awarding he prizes will be Kenneth Macowan, Director of the Actors' Theae of New York city Hatcher lughes, author of "Hell Bent For leaven" and Professor of Playriting at Columbia University; and he Director of the Vieux Carre. The contest is open to all writers, rofessional of otherwise.

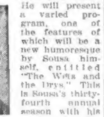
Sousa to Open His Concert Season Tour in Boston

Sousa and His Band come to Symphony Hall Sunday afternoon and evening, Sept. 9th, for their annual Boston concerts. He will present a varied program, one of the features of which will be a new humoresque by Sousa himself, entitled "The Wets and the Drys." This is Sousa's thirty-fourth annual season with his band. At the present moment they are playing their regular two-months' engagement at Willow Grove Park, Philadelphia, forming a special feature of the Sesquicentennial year in that city. They come directly from Philadelphia to Boston to open their tour of concerts.



Sousa

Kennedy Turns Showman, Barnum His Paradigm

Joseph P. Kennedy, native Bostonian, Harvard man, financier and director of many large enterprises, will exhibit his first effort as a motion picture producer—"Bigger Than Barnum's," a feature photoplay based upon circus life, which starts tomorrow at the Washington street Olympia. Mr. Kennedy acquired control of Film Booking Offices of America, one of the large motion picture production and distributing organizations, from the British interests which had previously controlled it, and put into effect certain production ideas of his own. This picture is the first photoplay to be completed under his administration, and he has arranged this early showing of it for his native city.

Joseph Kennedy

PERCY HAD IT COMING TO HIM, WHAT?

Percy Marmont has always wanted to go canoeing and camping in the Canadian woods country. Marmont is English, and ever since having come to America he has heard of the glories of Summer camping. But he has never managed to personally investigate this outdoor activity until "Mantrap," at the Metropolitan next week, was filmed.

Percy Marmont

"The first Autumn I planned to go," says Marmont, "I was suddenly in the position of finding my vacation cancelled.

"Then late one February my boss told me I was at last going to realize my ambition—he was sending me to the Canadian woods. But it was a snow picture! Everything was white and the thermometer stood about 15 below while I was there.

"The next Summer I didn't get a vacation. Too much work to do.

"The following Summer I got up there for two days, but was recalled to the studio. When time came for me to get a rest it was late Fall and the woods once again weren't so appealing."

At last, however, Marmont went canoeing. And now he's had quite enough. The location where "Mantrap" was actually taken was a river-and-stream country where life flows along—and none too serenely at that—in an endless succession of canoe riding. No other means of transportation is available. And Marmont's role in the picture, together with the necessity of getting about, compelled him to get more than his fill of a fancied favorite sport.

Young Schildkraut Gets Big Role in New Film

The first announcement concerning the cast for "The King of Kings", Cecil B. De Mille's forthcoming special, sets forth the information that Joseph Schildkraut will portray Judas, one of the most despicable figures in literature, in this picturization of the life of Christ. The character of Judas will be one of the most prominent ones in "The King of Kings" and Schildkraut has been given this difficult assignment by virtue of his splendid work in other De Mille productions. De Mille is still seeking an actress to portray Mary Magdelene in his picture.

CHANGES in VAUDEVILLE

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Allyn Mann Revue, with Wally Crisham and the Anora Sisters in a song and dance revue; Lewis and Ames in the skit, "We Know a Thing or Two"; the playlet, "A Perfect Day"; Furman and Evans, song duo; Rector and Cooper, dance stars of the Plantation Revue; "The Iumars", featuring "The Girl Without Nerves", and others. The feature photoplay will be "The Golden Web."

KEITH'S—"The Pompadour Ballet", an Albertina Rasch dance production; Oakes and Delour and company in an eccentric dance act; Moss and Frye, darky duo, in their skit, "How High Is Up?"; Dillon and Parker in "Puppy Love"; Kharum, the Persian pianist; McRae and Mott, comedy duo; Rule and O'Brien, singing comedians; the Lamson trio, and others.

FILM FARE FOR NEXT WEEK

METROPOLITAN—(Starting today) Clara Bow, Ernest Torrence and Percy Marmont in "Mantrap." The story was adapted from the Sinclair Lewis novel and is said to be an original comedy treatment of the oft repeated "eternal triangle" theme. Satire and humor are mingled with Summer campers and the delineation of country folks. On the stage Paul Oscard's "Seashore Frolics" will be seen with the George Sisters and many fair and melodious companions.

OLYMPIA—(Starting tomorrow) "Bigger Than Barnum's," with Viola Dana, George O'Hara, Ralph Lewis and Ralph Ince. The story was adapted from the original yarn by Arthur Guy Empey. A tale of circus life and the trials and tribulations of the people of the sawdust ring. There is romance, humor and a blazing fire scene for good measure—and a thrill. Princess Wah-Letka, Indian seeress, heads the vaudeville.

LOEW'S STATE—"Lew Tyler's Wives," adapted from the Wallace Irwin novel of marriage of the same name. In the cast are Frank Mayo, Ruth Clifford, Hedda Hopper and Helen Lee Worthing. Also the latest Hoot Gibson "Western," "The Man in the Saddle." On the stage Fiske O'Hara, singing actor, will be seen and heard in a repertoire of song and story.

* * *

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—"The Golden Web," adapted from the story by E. Phillips Oppenheim. A tale of a man who was caught in the golden web of the world of "big business." In the cast are Lillian Rich, Huntley Gordon, Lawford Davidson and Jay Hunt. Also vaudeville.

* * *

FENWAY—(Starting today) J. Stuart Blackton's "The Passionate Quest," with May McAvoy, and "Puppets," with Milton Sills. Starting Wednesday, Johnny Hines in "The Brown Derby," and Anita Stewart in "The Lodge in the Wilderness."

Revere Continues to Draw the Many Thousands

Revere Beach continues to prove its claim to the title, "New England's Playground" for never before in its long history have such enormous crowds been flocking to its shores as this season.

Visitors from every section of New England have availed themselves of the opportunity to spend a week end at the Beach. This has been made possible by the popular excursions conducted by the Boston & Maine railroad, and the result has been a constant influx of merry excursioners who delight in the many new amusements which dot this mile of crescent shaped boulevard.

Film Funster Bestows New Honors on Bard of Avon

Leave it to the gag man to supply a new one!

Jack Wagner, concocter of laughs for Corinne Griffith's current starring vehicle, "Just Off Broadway," declares that his calling is a most honorable and ancient vocation and dates back to an age before motion pictures were ever dreamed of. The father of his craft, Wagner declares, was William Shakespeare, who was a gag man before he ever wrote a line. History proves, Wagner says, that the Bard of Avon in his earlier days picked up a livelihood around the London theatres supplying bits of "business" and gags for the famous actors of those days.

NOTHING LIKE THOSE OLD TIME DANCES!

FLAPPER IN THE WILDERNESS! Clara Bow is the tiny teaser of the tall timberlands in "Mantrap" at the Metropolitan. And she has trapped the trappers into tripping the triple-toe strut. The old-timers, Charles Stevens and Kalla Pasha, hardly know what it's all about, but they are having the time of their lives.

SEERESS THE FEATURE AT OLYMPIA

Wa Letka, Indian princess of the Cherokees, distinguished as a seeress, comes to the Olympia this week prepared to demonstrate her powers of foresight, mind reading, thought transference and prophecy.

Wah-Letka

Among the people of her tribe Wah Letka was born an aristocrat. Her father was Chief Bison, who played a very important part in the history of his tribe. Almost as soon as she was able to express herself she gave unmistable evidence that she possessed extraordinary mental faculties. She seemed to have a supernatural ability to see into the future and foretell events in a way that mystified even the wise old medicine men of her people.

After showing brilliancy as a scholar in the lesser Indian schools, she was sent to Carlisle to complete her education and was always the wonder of her associates because of her knowledge of supposed secrets in their lives, as well as her ability to foretell future happenings.

Naturally, she was sought for the stage, and her success was so marked that she soon became known as "The Human Ouija Board," and soon created such interest that Florenze Ziegfeld secured her for his Midnight Frolic, where for a long time she made even sophisticated New Yorkers sit up and wonder.

Believe It or Not, It Was a Tough War on Musicians

From conducting a symphony orchestra to blowing an army bugle is, as you might say, quite a comedown in the musical scale. Yet, this is the experience of Del Castillo, who presides at the organ console at the "Met." During the war time Del Castillo was invited by the Pops orchestra in Symphony Hall to wield the baton as guest conductor for a performance of his own composition, "Fantasie of Harvard Airs." Almost the next day he enlisted and his musical attainments were recognized to the extent of allowing him to toot the bugle! But it was not long after that he was made bandmaster of the 302nd Artillery and all was righted.

LILLIAN RICH unwinds the tangles in "The Golden Web," new film at Loew's Orpheum next week.

Silver-Toned Tenor Comes to the State Next Week

Fiske O'Hara, the romantic star and American balladist, who will come to Loew's State next week, believes that acting ability is a chief asset to any singer. "Next to the gift of a voice and having it properly trained," says Mr. O'Hara, "nothing so aids the singer to render his number effectively as a technical knowledge of acting which only years of stage experience can give.

Fiske O'Hara

"After all, most good songs project a story, and the singer is really called upon to play a part in every song. If he happens to be a good actor as well as a good singer, his art will be doubly appreciated."

First Play of New Season to Open August 9th

As the opening attraction of their season in Boston, the Messrs. Shubert will send a new comedy drama entitled "My Country," which, from all reports, is an entirely different type of entertainment from anything that has hitherto been presented. The play is by William J. Perlman, and deals with the tangled loves of boys and girls of different racial descent. A cast of distinguished players has been chosen by Messrs. Shubert to present "My Country," including: Frederick Burton, Louise Randolph, Marguerite Mesler, Lee Kohlmar, Roy R. Buckles, Pola Carter, Joseph B. Verdi, Earl House and Erin O'Brien-Moore. The play will be seen here prior to its Broadway run and immediately following preliminary performances at Atlantic City, Long Branch and Asbury Park. Owing to quite extensive renovating and redecorating now in progress at all of the Shubert houses in Boston, it is impossible at this time to definitely announce theatre or the date, but it will probably be at the Wilbur on August 9.

Looking Ahead

AUGUST 7—
"The Show-Off," with Ford Sterling and Lois Wilson, at the Metropolitan.
AUGUST 9—
"My Country," at the Wilbur.
AUGUST 14—
Gloria Swanson in "Fine Manners," at the Metropolitan.

TRAFFIC COPS TRY HOLDING HELEN

Helen Ford apparently has an irresistible attraction for traffic officers.

Small wonder! When they see what looks like a little girl at the wheel of a snappy car cutting all the corners of the traffic regulations they are inspired to investigate. When they ask questions they get a smile, which usually wins out in the end; but some are more inquisitive. As a consequence Helen has to carry not only her license and registration number, but her birth certificate, marriage "lines" and vaccination marks!

She is rapidly making the personal acquaintance of all the traffic policemen within a radius of twenty miles around the Hub, and at her present rate will know most of the magistrates of Massachusetts before the engagement of "Dearest Enemy" at the Tremont Theatre ends the latter part of August.

Only twice has she had any more serious delay than a pleasant conversation with a policeman, or maybe, a social call at the nearest station house. Once she was cutting in and out of the three-tier traffic on a hurried return from the South Shore, when a cycle cop held her up and demanded "Why"?

"I'm in a hurry to get to the Tremont Theatre for the performance," said she.

"So, you're another one of thim actoresses?—And what do you do?"

"If I had a barrel I'd show you."

"So—you're a bootlegger?"

"No—I'm a barrel-legger; see—here's a picture of me wearing it."

But just as she press clipping convinced the suspicious cop, and he was passing her along, a drawbridge went up, and Helen was late after all.

Then came Helen's arrest at Weymouth because she forgot to carry all her licenses, and, of course, the Massachusetts one was "the missing paper."

On her entrance in the second act of "Dearest Enemy" Sir John says to her: "Why Betsy"—(that being her name in the play)—"where have you been"? "Shure I've been consortin' wid traffic cops," answered Helen tartly—in the brogue of Betsy Burke, the Irish-American heroine of the comedy—but with what is known as "the personal touch" to her impromptu lines.

Stuart Runs a Big Errand for Hays and the Films

The advent of August ushers in the Greater Movie Season and Lawrence F. ("Buddy") Stuart, formerly an important figure among local movie men and now the personally appointed representative of Will Hays, will act as chief usher for the proceedings in New England.

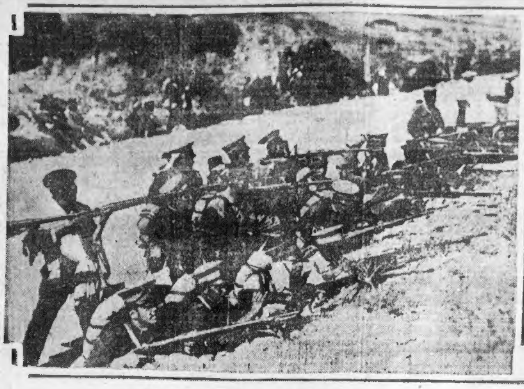
"Buddy" Stuart

The Greater Movie Season is a promotional project organized by Mr. Hays who, as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., is the guiding light of the entire picture industry in this country—a sort of Judge Landis for the movies. The campaign is intended to increase everyone's interest in the cinema and bring out the best in the educational and entertainment advantages of the screen.

HOWARD TO RE-OPEN.

The burlesque season will open at the old Howard on Monday, August 16, playing the attraction known as the "Heart Breakers," with Izzy Cohen and Mickey O'Brien in the leading roles.

MEXICO AGAIN ON VERGE OF CHAOS AS POLICE AND TROOPS QUELL RELIGIOUS RIOTS IN CAPITAL



MEXICAN FEDERAL TROOPS
All branches of the Mexican army are being held in readiness to suppress rioting as a result of the religious trouble now sweeping the country as government closes all churches.

PRESIDENT CALLES

ARMED POLICE AND TROOPS GUARD MEXICO CITY

arrests were made here on charges of seditious assault.

One fireman was wounded and five arrests made at the Salta De La Agua Church.

Expecting further violence, additional troops were called out and the military guards around public buildings were increased three times the normal strength. Preparations for quick movement of troops all over the country were made by the War Department and reserves have been ordered to the colors.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT.

Orders for the seizure of the churches were issued by Attorney-General Romeo Ortega. Ortega is understood to have been actuated by a desire to forestall the churches being delivered to lay committees of eight as announced by the retiring Catholic clergy.

In Mexico City the Federation of Labor will take possession of thirty-five of the city's principal churches. Each church will be cared for by a foreman and five laborers. The foreman will receive ten pesos daily, the laborers four each for keeping the building furnishings in good repair and protecting the art treasures from vandals and thieves.

A monster demonstration as evidence of support of the government's policy is to be held tomorrow by the regional confederation of labor and the Socialist and Labor parties in the Congress, which control the Chamber of Deputies and some senatorial groups and government employes. The confederation, which claims a membership of 1,350,000, is the strongest group of Mexican organized labor.

400 Marriages in Mexico Yesterday

Mexico City, July 31 (A.P.).—Services were suspended in the churches yesterday at various hours, ranging from as early as 3:00 p. m. to 8 or 9 o'clock, but in all cases the suspensions left would be worshippers unaccommodated.

It is estimated that about 400 marriage ceremonies were performed in all of Mexico City's churches yesterday, and at the cathedral alone there were 8,000 confirmations and 8,000 baptisms.

Secretary of the Interior Tejeda is quoted by El Universal as saying that the priests ceasing religious services will not be allowed to resume until they comply fully with the government's requirements regarding religious affairs. This means that the priests would have to register with the municipal authorities, give information desired regarding church property, and subject themselves to the constitutional regulations.

Government Owns All Churches, It Is Claimed

Mexico City, July 31 (A.P.).—The Mexican government in taking charge of Catholic Churches, claims that jewels and treasures and all other property as well as real estate and buildings are the property of the Federal government and have been for more than half a century.

This claim is made by virtue of the reform laws and the constitution of the reform war period, which forbade the church to own property in Mexico and declared all church property confiscated and reverted to government ownership. The present constitution of 1917 repeats the declaration that all church property belongs to the Federal government.

The Catholic authorities never have admitted the Federal government's claim.

The government's contention is that it loans to worshippers church buildings, grounds, jewels and other properties, the title to which for sixty years has been constitutionally vested in the government.

It is unofficially estimated that the jewels in Mexican Catholic churches alone are worth several million of dollars.

Boston Episcopal Churches to Pray for Mexican Catholics

In every Episcopal church in Boston tomorrow prayers will be offered up for the protection and safety of Catholics who are being persecuted in Mexico.

Rev. C. N. Field, in charge of St. John the Evangelist Church, and temporary superior of the Cowley Brotherhood, was deeply affected by the sufferings of Catholics in Mexico.

"We are all going to pray," he said, "for these people deprived of their usual conditions of worship. These brethren are suffering and it is our Christian duty and responsibility to pray for them.

"Everyone in this order has been instructed to pray and they have all expressed their gratification for the opportunity to pray for these suffering Christians.

"Some are Bolshevistic there. They are atheistic in their tendencies.

"When I went to Mexico twenty years ago, wearing my cossack, as do all the members of this order, I was told that I would be shot down. I do not see how anyone can co-operate with a government which places a ban on religious ceremonies. We must help the Roman Catholics all we can."

Calles Defines Position of Mexico

New York, July 31 (A.P.).—The Evening Post today published a statement from President Calles of Mexico defining the position of his government in the present religious crisis in Mexico. The statement follows:

"The boycott has no importance whatsoever. The government has never tried to close the churches and will not try to do so. If the churches are abandoned by the Catholic priests they will remain open under the care of committees of ten townsmen appointed by the president of the town according to law. If the priests merely stop preaching without committing any violations of the law they will not be molested."

CAL WON'T LIFT ARMS EMBARGO

Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 31 (A. P.).—The presidential spokesman has become sufficiently talkative to reveal Mr. Coolidge's opinion that the embargo on arms to Mexico will not be lifted.

In view of the present religious situation in Mexico, it was said, President Coolidge does not expect any action will be taken in the near future toward lifting the embargo on arms to that country which has existed for a year and a half.

ORTEGA WEEPS AS ORDERS ARE CARRIED OUT

Mexico City, July 31 (A.P.).—Attorney-General Ortega was deeply moved and openly wept during the closing of the offices of the archbishopric at the cathedral here.

Simultaneously throughout the Republic government agents were closing or preparing to close all Catholic offices and structures except actual places of worship, giving the government control over all storehouses of church valuables.

Archbishop Mora Del Rio was not present personally when the archbishopric offices were sealed. Bishop Maximo Ruiz y Florez, the archbishop's secretary, was in charge when Senor Ortega and his staff arrived. Monsignor Ruiz formally protested. Senor Ortega, however, although showing great emotion, proceeded firmly in executing his own order. Afterward the attorney-general asked Monsignor Ruiz if he had anything to say.

"I could say many things," replied the prelate, "but it would be useless. Under the circumstances, what could be accomplished by any words of ours?"

Senor Ortega's orders for the government to assume control of all church offices and structures, except places of worship, do not include the personal property of priests and prelates. Archbishop Mora y Del Rio is still living in his residence at Tacuba, a suburb of the capital, and other church dignitaries remain in their homes. Only the archbishipric offices at the cathedral were sealed.

The government says that the action in taking over church valuables is for the purpose of guarding them during the present uncertain period. It says that it is the intention to turn over all such property to citizens' committees, which will succeed priests as custodians of the churches as soon as the committees are installed

Hypocrite! Cries Woman as She Slaps Bishop

Mexico City, July 31 (A.P.).—While the archbishop was confirming children in the cathedral at Puebla a woman approached, called him a hypocrite and slapped his face.

This fact became known today in a telegram from General Amaya, military commander, to President Calles.

"I beg to inform you," said the telegram, "that while a fanatic Catholic attempted to murder me, something was happening at the Cathedral deserving of your attention.

"As the archbishop was making confirmations a woman approached him and said: 'In the name of free and reasonable women, I deliver this to you, hypocrit.'

"The woman then slapped the prelate's face. She escaped from irate Catholics in the cathedral."

Vatican Aroused at Expulsion of Crespi

Rome, July 31 (I.N.S.).—The Vatican was greatly aroused today over reports that Mexico has expelled Monsignor Crespi, who has been in charge of the apostolic legation there.

The Pope, it is understood, has not received an official report of the [illegible] but it is being used by influential persons to urge [illegible] Mexico. The Pope [illegible] since it is reported that he feels such an action would not change the attitude of the Mexican government and might result [illegible] ing of the influence of the church in Mexico.

'HANDS OFF!' IS U. S. POLICY IN MEXICO

Washington, July 31 (I.N.S.).—The State Department is keeping in closest touch with the situation in Mexico and there was no indication today that a change in the "hands-off" policy of the Coolidge administration is contemplated.

Secretary of State Kellogg has received demands that a protest be forwarded to Mexico against the possible taking over of American-owned church property, with the department's protest against Mexican anti-alien, oil and land laws cited as precedent.

The State Department has been under pressure from arms and munitions makers for months to lift the embargo on shipments to Mexico. The administration has taken the position that it cannot interfere in the operation of Mexican domestic laws.

Soldiers to Prevent Fights Among Deputies

Mexico City, July 31.—One hundred infantrymen have garrisoned the Chamber of Deputies to prevent pistol battles between rival groups of deputies.

This action was taken at the request of the presiding officer who pointed out that a senator, a judge and a deputy have already been shot to death in quarrels.

The Bank of Mexico as well as other financial institutions report that unusually heavy withdrawals of cash have begun. The National Bank has stopped payment of checks in anticipation of a run.

Movie theatre owners will meet Monday to consider action. It is understood that many are in favor of closing the theatres, but fear to do so lest they be punished by the government.

The jails of the capital and other important centres are rapidly filling with persons arrested for alleged activity against the government. The second directorate of the Young Men's Catholic Association was imprisoned today.

3 MEN SCALDED ON SHIP TAKEN OFF BY SEA GUARD

Lewes, Del., July 31 (A.P.).—The Coast Guard station here was advised by radio today that patrol boat No. 217 of the Cape May station was proceeding to Lewes with three men who had been scalded on a steamship. Neither the name of the vessel nor any particulars were known, but it was reported the ship was the Munplace, from New York for Cuba. Doctors will meet the patrol.

10,000,000 IN MEXICO WITH NO PRIESTS

Mexico. City, July 31 (A.P.)—Ten million or more Catholics throughout Mexico today were without benefit of clergy.

The putting into effect of the government's new religious regulations was inaugurated with disturbances in various sections of the capital, resulting in the calling out of the police and firemen to disperse the crowds which had clashed with the police guarding churches.

The priests had been ordered by the episcopate to withdraw from all churches today as a protest against the government's religious regulations. Simultaneous with their departure there went into effect the economic boycott of the National League for Defense of Religious Liberty, in which Catholics are requested to cease spending money on anything except on absolute necessities, the object being to bring about an economic crisis which will influence the government to modify its religious attitude.

STRICT ENFORCEMENT.

The Government has not given the slightest indication that it intends to do otherwise than to make the new law operative. Officials and agents reiterated today that it was the intention of President Calles and the government officials strictly to enforce the constitutional clauses with regard to religion, which have virtually been a dead letter for years.

With a view to preventing or putting down any disturbances, the Government has dispatched troops to strategic points. They have been ordered to maintain a state of constant readiness for any eventuality.

One of the last acts of the Government before the new law went into effect was to order the expulsion from the country of Monsignor Tito Crespi, who has been in charge of the apostolic legation in Mexico City since the expulsion of Monsignor Caruana, the papal nuncio, who is an American citizen. Monsignor Crespi was told to leave Mexico within twenty-four hours, but through the intervention of the Italian legation, the time was extended to forty-eight hours.

DENIES PART IN CONFLICT.

The prelate, however, will not take advantage of this extension, and will leave tonight for Linden, N. J., to visit relatives prior to proceeding to Rome. The Government considered his presence in Mexico "inconvenient." He denies that he has taken any part in the present religious conflict, saying he had been absolutely neutral in all Mexican religious affairs.

Feeling runs so high that the slightest provocation is apt to cause trouble. For instance, the gasoline tank of an automobile outside the church of the Sacred Heart exploded last night while the congregation was praying just before the departure of the priests.

The excited crowd, thinking the detonation was that of a bomb, or the commencement of a battle, rushed outside the edifice, apparently ready for anything. A few communicants were bruised in the jam.

At another church somebody started a report that the priests were going to be arrested. Thereupon 500 women worshippers mounted guard outside, determined to combat the police if they made their appearance. Fortunately no officers of the law came up.

PRINTERS GO ON STRIKE ON 2 CHARLESTON PAPERS

Charleston, W. Va., July 31 (A.P.)—Printers and linotype operators of both daily papers in Charleston went on strike today in consequence of failure of efforts to agree with publishers of the Daily Mail and the Gazette upon renewal of a wage agreement which expired at midnight. The men asked an increase in wages and shorter hours.

Mrs. Dorothy Aleorisio of Revere, daughter of a Methodist minister, was reported missing by her husband, Louis, who told the police a cocoa salesman, seen frequently in Revere with a sporty roadster, also is missing.

What Mexico Turmoil Is All About

CAUSES.

Laws effective today enforcing the constitution of 1857, reaffirmed by the constitution of 1917. These regulations provide:

No foreign clergymen may function in Mexico.

Church ownership of property is forbidden.

All church property reverts to the State.

Religious instruction in schools, convents and monasteries is forbidden.

It is illegal for clergy or religious periodicals to criticize the government.

EFFECTS.

Mexican episcopate ordered as a protest discontinuance of all services in which 20,000 priests function, beginning today.

Some 10,000,000 Catholics will be unable to hear mass or receive penance, communion or other sacraments, except baptism and matrimony, which will be given by laymen.

The Church planned to have lay committees conduct some 12,000 churches for worship, but the Government ordered that they be taken over by committees named by the mayors. Ecclesiastical property, other than churches, are closed under seal.

Economic boycott has been ordered by organized Catholic laymen. Purchases will be limited to necessities.

Troops have been called out at various places to maintain order.

GOVERNMENT'S ATTITUDE.

Church and State must be separated and the Church must eschew politics.

President Calles regards it as "a final struggle" between "light and darkness."

CHURCH'S ATTITUDE.

Persecution is threatening religious freedom. The Church denies it has meddled in politics.

High authority in Rome says Pope Pius does not desire to impose an official interdict in Mexico unless it is absolutely necessary. The pontiff has requested the faithful throughout the world to pray tomorrow for their Mexican co-religionists.

Riots Can't Cut Tie of France-U. S., Cries War Ace

Deal, N. J., July 31 (A.P.)—Reported French hostility to America is of no importance and the work of politicians and lower class persons, Captain Rene Fonck, French ace, soon to attempt a New York to Paris flight, asserted today.

"The veterans of France pledge everlasting friendship to the veterans of America," he told the Associated Press.

"Every man who fought with the French colors and who saw America so nobly and generously enter the struggle dougts that the ties between the two nations can ever be drawn asunder.

"France owes America a great debt and we will not be unworthy of it. The warmest feeling exists on the part of the French government toward the American government."

POINCARE WINS ON WINE TAX

Paris, July 31 (I.N.S.).—The official journal will announce tomorrow an increase in the interest rate on National Defense bonds, which now bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent.

Paris, July 31 (A.P.).—The Poincare government today got its first vote of confidence, 296 to 178, on its financial measures to rehabilitate French finances. The vote was on the first article, raising the tax on transportation of wine.

An earlier vote, 380 to 150, authorized immediate consideration of the financial bill.

Poincare will convoke the Senate and Chamber of Deputies as a national assembly, at Versailles, in August, instead of at Paris, to vote a special constitutional law for creation of a sinking fund for amortization of the national floating debt, it was revealed.

SANDERS SICK; COMING TO HUB

Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 31 (A.P.).—Everett Sanders, secretary to President Coolidge, is to go to Boston tomorrow night to consult specialists for an intestinal ailment that has kept him confined to his bed for over a week.

The illness has been described as not serious, but it has been stubborn in yielding to treatment. Specialists will be consulted upon the advice of Dr. James F. Coupal, physician to President Coolidge.

A report on rubber tree growing conditions in the Far East is to be made to President Coolidge Tuesday by Harvey S. Firestone, Jr. of Akron, O., son of the rubber manufacturer. Mr. Firestone has recently made a trip of inspection in the Far East.

The rubber situation has long occupied the attention of the President and Secretary Hoover, in the hope the United States may be made more independent of British markets.

SHAW HITS OWN, LAUDS GERMANS

London, July 31 (A.P.)—George Bernard Shaw believes he owes his "recognition in Europe as a thinker and a dramatic poet to Germany and his reputation as a dangerous and disreputable person" to the governing classes in his own country.

In a characteristic letter to Dr. Gustav F. Sthamer, German ambassador in London, Shaw praises Germany and criticises the British government for prohibiting the broadcasting of his speech at his recent 70th birthday. His letter was in acknowledgement of a congratulatory communication from Foreign Minister Stresemann.

ORDERS MOOSE TO STOP VIOLATING DRY LAW

Pittsburgh, July 31 (A.P.)—Secretary of Labor Davis, as director-general of the Loyal Order of Moose, has sent a letter to Moose lodges of the Pittsburgh district notifying them the order will tolerate no violation of the prohibition law in Moose clubs.

The letter followed raids upon and a demand by the Pittsburgh Council of Churches for revocation of charters of lodges found violating the law. "We will positively tolerate no further violation of the laws," the letter said. It ordered the lodges to "cease immediately" if they were dispensing "liquid refreshments prohibited by law."

TWO DRIVERS ESCAPE IN MAIL TRUCK CRASH

A mail truck driver and the operator of a pleasure car escaped with minor injuries today when their machines crashed together and turned turtle at Brimmer and Mt. Vernon streets, West End. Firemen attached to Engine 10 dragged the men from the wreckage. Neither suffered more than a few scratches. The driver of the mail truck was William Robinson of Humboldt avenue, Dorchester. Walter Englert of No. 86 Montabella road, Jamaica Plain, brother of City Councillor Englert, was the operator of the other car.

SEE DOUBLE MURDER IN ILLINOIS MYSTERY

Champaign, Ill., July 31 (A.P.).—Faced by two mysterious slayings that stand out against a background of long business activity by Anna Carmody among the negro population, officials today sought to link them by one hand. Authorities believe the person who shot and killed Morgan Knox, negro porter, and left his body on a country road ten days ago, also killed the middle-aged and reputed wealthy business woman.

"NICKEL THIEF" GETS 2 MONTHS; HELD FOR R. I.

Sentenced to two months in jail as a "nickel thief" after police testified he had consistently robbed New England telephone coin boxes in Boston, Joseph Ryan, twenty-six, of Providence, was today immediately rearrested for the Providence police on a similar charge. Special Officers Troy and Lynch of the Milk street station and Special Agent Stanley of the Telephone Company told Judge Sullivan they caught Ryan looting coin boxes.

300 HUNT MISSING CONNECTICUT MAN

Deep River, Ct., July 31 (A.P.)—Three hundred men and boys spent today in a fruitless search for Philip R. Pratt, 77-year-old manufacturer, who disappeared from his office after leaving a note which indicated he might attempt suicide.

Pratt had a large financial obligation to meet August 1. He purchased the business which bears his name a year ago.

CARAWAY SEES PARTY VICTORY

New York, July 31 (A.P.).—If the two-thirds rule at the next Democratic National Convention is suspended, Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York will be nominated by acclamation, in the opinion of Senator T. H. Caraway of Arkansas, who sailed today on the Celtic to attend the annual meeting of the Interparliamentary Union at Geneva.

Caraway sai dthat while he admires Smith he does not believe he can be elected owing to his avowed wet policies and his religion.

Caraway predicted a Democrat would be elected President but that the Democrats would "select some man, not even now known to politics who would be only a name and the Republicans would do the same."

Recalled by Spain

Paris, July 31.—The Spanish minister to Mexico has been recalled owing to the mildness with which he defended the interests of Spanish Catholics in that country, advices

CLOSED DOOR IS PEACE MENACE

Williamstown, July 31° (A.P.).—The closed door policy of most of the world, which prohibits the freedom of search for minerals that are necessary to world progress, is seen by Dr. Charles K. Leith at the Institute of Politics as a menace to peace.

For many minerals, including oil, we do not know today the sources we will be drawing on a decade hence, he said, and the open door policy is essential if we are to satisfy the demand for these minerals.

National reasons stand back of the closed door policy, but demands for minerals transcend national boundaries, and commercial and political pressure opens the door, sometimes, by bribery, intrigue, or private bargaining, he said.

The United States, excelling other nations in experience in the explorations of natural resources, is met by a spirit of antagonism in attempting to open up new fields abroad, he said, for our efforts are construed as avaricious, or solely for national gain.

SECOND SECTION

FIGURES FROM AMERICA'S SPORTING HALL OF FAME

THE PHANTOM of the gridiron. "Red" Grange, ex-University of Illinois and present New York pro star.

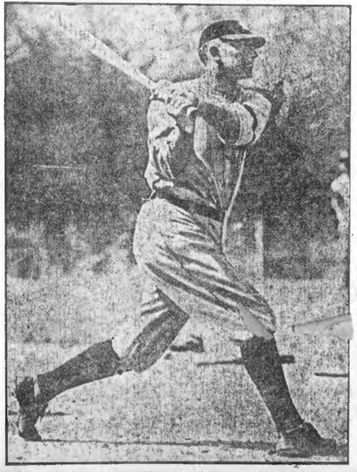
GOLFING GLENNA Collett is the Queen of the Links, and a credit to her regal position. She is still playing excellently.

THE GREATEST GOLFER of them all. Bobby Jones of Atlanta, American and British open golf champion. His performances this year have surpassed any in the history of the grand old game.

THE GYRENE. Gene Tunney, who will fight Dempsey for the world's heavyweight title. He learned his fighting in the marines.

HELEN OF AMERICA is what they're calling Helen Wills now, and she deserves the title. She's the second best tennis player and perhaps the best sportswoman in the world.

ALL AMERICAN honors were handed Walter Kopisch for his sensational play at Columbia. He is now starring in the pro game for Buffalo, his home town.



THE GEORGIA PEACH, Tyrus Raymond Cobb, Detroit manager and star, one of baseball's perennial iron men, and still at this late stage of the game one of its speediest and most consistent products.

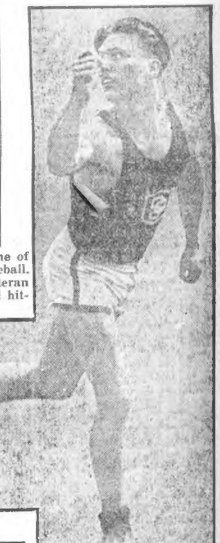
SPEED is Ralph De Palma's middle name. He is the dean of American automobile racing drivers.

THE HORSEHIDE CHORUS will now render the popular selection, "When the Bam-Bam-Bino's Sore." When Mr. Babe Ruth is sore, the horsehide covers on the little pellets are certain of being well tanned. Babe is in the process of pursuing his 1921 home run record, and is showing some speed at that!

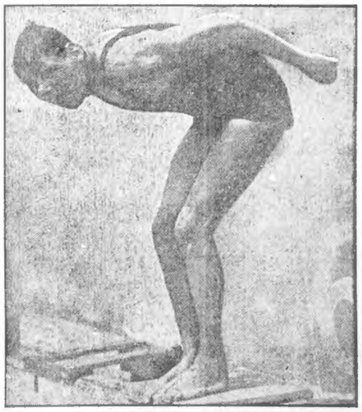
THE HAIG HIMSELF. Smiling Walter Hagen, monarch of the links, who maintains a consistently brilliant pace over the greensward. A fine competitive player.

THE SHADOW of Harry Wills persists in falling across the path of heavyweight contenders.

THE BIG TRAIN, one of the marvels of baseball. Walter Johnson, veteran of veterans, and still hitting on all six.



A MAN OF WEIGHTS. Clarence "Bud" Houser, Southern California track captain, and world's record holder in the discus and shotput.



PERFECTION. "When I first saw Weissmuller swim," said the Australian star, Beaurepaire, "I knew that I saw perfection." This is Johnny Weissmuller, ladies and gentlemen.

MERCURY must have been one of Charley Paddock's ancestors. He is called the "World's Fastest Human." And believe us, he's fast!

U. S. VOTES FOR POPULAR ATHLETES

Helen Wills

A nation-wide poll for America's most popular sport personages is on. The Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers throughout the country are giving an opportunity for all sport followers to indicate their favorites in the field of athletic prowess, both professional and amateur. Everybody is eligible to vote. The ballots will be tabulated, recorded and published each day, not only from Boston and the East, but from all sections of the United States. Handsome trophies are to be presented to the athletes voted most popular. Who are YOUR favorites? Are they to be found in today's sport picture section which contains photographs of many of the prominent stars of the modern day? Do not let the fact that their pictures are not shown today deter you from voting for those whom you like best. A ballot is published for the convenience of voters. This ballot, or one similar, may be used. Voters may cast but one ballot, but they should indicate their first, second and third choices for the popularity honors. Present day stars in any form of sport—boxing wrestling, tennis, track, baseball, football, etc.—may be considered. Address all ballots to the Popularity Editor, Boston Evening American.

STIMPSON TWO UP ON NEWTON IN N. E. TOURNAMENT

Struggle for Supremacy Results in Brilliant Duel Between Boston Players

BULLETIN.

Nayatt, R. I., July 31 (I.N.S.).—Edwin S. Stimpson of the Brae-Burn Country Club, Newton, Mass., was 2 up on Frank C. Newton of the Country Club, Boston, at the end of the 29th hole of their 36-hole final match for the New England amateur golf championship.

By BILL GRIMES

Bill Grimes

Nayatt, R. I., July 31.—After battling through the first half of the thirty-six hole final for the New England amateur championship this morning at the Rhode Island Country Club, Edward S. Stimpson of Brae Burn had a two-hole advantage over Frank C. Newton of the Country Club.

The morning round brought out some fine golf. Both players were right at the top of their game. On hole after hole the long irons to the green by Stimpson, and the clever snug approaches of Newton, brought out round after round of applause from the gallery.

The thrill of the first eighteen holes was furnished by Frank Newton on the sixth green. He was on nicely with his second with Stimpson over the green.

The Brae Burn representative niblicked his way in great style to the green, playing his opponent a dead stymie. Newton went for the cup but hit Stimpson's ball and was still stymied. Taking a mashie from his bag he jumped Stimpson's ball and a six foot roll carried him into the cup. Then Stimpson sunk his putt for a half.

Stimpson played as fine a round of golf with the exception of the first and eleventh holes as has ever rolled from the clubs of any golfer. Generally he was remarkably straight and long from the tees and the fine iron shots he played had Newton on the defense most of the time.

Along with his great work through the fair greens Stimpson's putting was wonderful.

NEWTON MAKES SLIP.

He had five consecutive one-putt greens after he had taken three putts on the level on the fourth. Stimpson put his approach putt dead to the cup and was one up when Newton took three putts which is an almost unheard of slip for the Country Club veteran.

Stimpson had a three-putt green at the fifth. He was on from the tee while Newton failed to get home, but chipped up snug. Eddy was short with first putt and then ran by and Newton won with a three.

NEWTON IN STYMIE.

A great second shot got Newton home on the sixth with Stimpson over. Eddy played a clever niblick and was about eleven feet away from the cup in three. Newton putted and hit Stimpson's ball and he was stymie, but negotiated this one by jumping Stimpson and running into the cup for his four. A fine putt halved the hole for Eddy.

Both found the trap with seconds with Newton shy and Stimpson to the right, hole high. The Country Club player chipped out in his usual clever style, the ball running to within four feet of the cup.

The next hole was halved with fours both being home with their second taking two putts.

"Newtie" was forced to take a five which squared the match for the former Harvard captain got his par 4.

FLUBBED BRASSIE COSTLY.

All even going to the seventh, Newton flubbed his brassie and was just shy of the crosstraps. Newton was on with his third but Stimpson just missed chipping in for a three and after Newton missed his putt he conceded Stimpson his four for a win.

Stimpson played another fine brassie shot going to the eighth, while Newton was in the hollow in two and shy with his next. Again Stimpson stuck his approach stoney and got his four for a win, which put him two up.

Stimpson was in the rough to the right from the ninth tee and pulled his second to the rough. They halved the hole with fours.

LOSER IN TROUBLE.

After they had halved the tenth with threes, they messed up the eleventh. Newton did not hit a real shot all the way through the green. Stimpson, after he had reached the green, took three putts and Newton won the hole with a six.

A birdie on the twelfth squared the match for Newton. He played a beautiful second to the green and dropped a ten-footer for a 3.

Eddie got down to business again, going to the thirteenth and getting home with a long drive and an iron with Newton sixty yards short with his second, put his third dead and got his four, Newton failing to get up with his approach.

After they had halved the next four holes, Stimpson missing a birdie on the short seventeenth by a pair, Eddie won the eighteenth with a four. Stimpson was two up. The cards:

THE FATAL SHOT

Frank C. Newton of The Country Club putting the shot that defeated Jesse Guilford at Nyatt. The match went to the 23rd hole. Newton, who met Eddie Stimpson in the All-Massachusetts final. The Newton-Guilford match was featured by the former's short driving and deadly putting—the type of game most discouraging to compete against.

WINNER!

This is Frank C. Newton of The Country Club, who reached the finals of the N. E. amateur tourney by defeating Jesse Guilford

SCHOOL FIRES COACH; DROPS ATHLETICS

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 31 (A.P.).—Intercollegiate athletics have been discontinued and the Rev. Kenneth L. Bray, director of athletics, has been dropped from the faculty of St. Stephen's Episcopal College at Annandale-on-Hudson.

Coach Bray confirmed the action after a fruitless conference with a committee of the college trustees in New York this morning.

The discontinuanse of intercollegiate athletic competition and the dropping of the coach are accepted at the college and by the students as induced by Coach Bray's sympathy and assistance to the student strikers last Spring when they forced concessions from the trustees which limited the disciplinary activities of Dr. Berand Iddings Bell, president of the college.

News of the trustees' action, taken July 22, became public today and at once the leaders of the student body began circularizing the students to learn their reaction to Bray's dismissal.

Coach Bray has been popular with the students and successful as a coach.

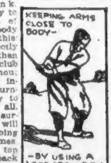
Inside Golf



KEEPING ARMS CLOSE TO BODY—
—BY USING A LOOP AROUND THE

There is not nearly as much body twisting involved in a pivot as many players think. One good way to get a sense of the correct body turning is this: Stand correctly to the ball, then swing the club back without any definite intention of turning the body to the right at all. To your surprise you will find, after doing this a few times that at the top of your back swing the left shoulder just about points at the ball. In other words, the body will turn naturally and easily if you leave it to itself. It does it also without straining and effort, neither of which should at any time be noticeable in the back swing. Moreover, if you try a few swings as suggested you will probably note that the turning that naturally occurs will take place above the waist mostly. The really surprising thing about the golf swing is the natural ease of it when you do it correctly.

GET-TOGETHER FOR YACHTS TODAY

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

One of the most attractive yachting affairs on today's racing schedule will be that held inside of Minot's Light off Cohasset, when the neighboring town of Duxbury sends its yacht club members and many friends to the annual get-together of the two organizations, the Cohasset Yacht Club and that of Duxbury Yacht Club.

This annual event always brings results, as the members of both clubs always have a great time. Last year the weatherman was very disappointing to the yachting folks when they met at Duxbury, as conditions were far from being perfect. It is hoped that they will be blessed with some sort of good weather today.

Of course, to make things perfect, Clarence W. Barron, commodore of the Cohasset Yacht Club, will be on hand, also his son-in-law, Hugh Bancroft, who is a very able assistant when it comes to holding regattas, and Richard Waters, who is another cog in the Cohasset Yacht Club. The ladies always put in their appearance and with a whole lot of work can assure all of a pleasant time.

All Cohasset folks will make for the rocks at the harbor entrance to witness the races, while many more will turn over their motor in their water crafts and make for the starting line to get a closeup on the sailing races.

Pros Oppose Rivals Sunday

The East Boston Pros will play their first game of a series with the East Boston Baseball Club at World War Memorial Park, Sunday afternoon. From all indications, great rivalry exists between these two clubs and a hard game should be witnessed.

Herb Hall, the "Iron Duke," has been winning consistently for Denver in the Western League. He hasn't lost a game on the home lot.

Profanity Stirs League Chief to Fine Two

In a campaign against the use of profanity and obscene language on the ball field, President Claude B. Davidson of the New England League has imposed fines of $10 each upon Manager George Taylor and Shortstop Knothe of the Lawrence team.

In explaining his action President Davidson said:

I have fined Manager Tyler and Shortstop Knothe of Lawrence $10 each for using profane language on the playing field. No doubt there have been other instances of profanity which have not been reported to me and which, unfortunately, must remain unpunished.

I have notified umpires that they will be fined if they do not report any player using profane language, and I have notified all managers that in the future I will not limit the fine to $10

The public has the key to the featherweight situation. It is the great jury before which the boxers must ultimately plead their cases. Boxing Commissions and others become insignificant when the voice of the people makes known its choice.

Who do YOU consider the world's featherweight champion?

YOUR DECISION is the VITAL one.

The Boston Evening American is eager to receive the co-operation of the boxing fans of New England in deciding who among the world's leading featherweights is the monarch of his class.

RED CHAPMAN, gallant hearted Jewish featherweight from Dorchester, has his backers.

So has Dick (Honey Boy) Finnegan, also of Dorchester, in whose veins warm Celtic blood flows.

New Bedford is backing Chick Suggs, sensational negro featherweight.

From the North End comes words of praise for Sammy Fuller.

Other fans still insist Johnny Dundee, who like Fuller is an Italian, is still champion as he has never been beaten at 126 pounds since he won the title from Eugene Criqui.

There are other ring followers who believe Babe Herman, Joe Glick, or Benny Bass is supreme in the featherweight group.

The Boston Evening American wants to get the real low down on the featherweight situation. It is putting the entire matter up to the fans of New England.

Study the names of the featherweight contenders which are printed on this page. Then mark a cross beside the name of YOUR choice and mail the coupon to Jack Conway, Boston Evening American, Winthrop Square, Boston. The vote received by the various contenders will then be published from day to day.

NEW ENGLAND interest will probably centre around Chapman, Finnegan and Suggs.

Chapman has beaten Finnegan, but lost to Suggs. Finnegan and Suggs have never met.

Each member of this trio has beaten most of the outstanding contenders who hail from outside of New England. All three have tacked a defeat onto Babe Herman of California.

The New York Athletic Commission will be interested to know what the fans of New England think of the featherweight division. It will probably find that fistic followers here are better acquainted with the records of the 126-pounders than the learned boxing fathers.

Thirty-five hundred boxing fans paid approximately $5,000 to witness the show last night in Mechanics Building, which was the initial attraction of the Queensboro A. C., featuring Tommy Loughran and Johnny Risko.

The net receipts were approximately $1,000. The new boxing club lost $1,500, after the boxers were paid and all other expenses were taken out as the show cost $6,000

Loughran realized he would have to make a hurricane finish if he were to avoid defeat. He proved equal to the task and in the ninth frame piled up a commanding lead by scoring a flock of left hand blows to the head and occasionally crossing his right to the body.

THE real kick of the show was furnished when Danny Cooney of Trenton, N. J., outpointed Johnny Indressano of East Boston in an eight-round semi-final. It was a slashing battle and replete with thrills. The boys both displayed fine boxing and punching ability.

Nick Madona of Lexington won the decision over Charley Donovan of Dorchester in an eight-session affair, while Ted Johnson of Fort Banks stopped Joey Holland of Beverly in two frames.

Richards Shines in 'Met' Tourney

New York, July 31.—Vincent Richards staged one of the most sensational performances of his career on the Crescent Athletic Club courts when he entered the semi-final round of the Metropolitan grass court singles championship by defeating Alfred H. Chapin Jr., 6—2, 6—2.

In sharp contrast to the play of Richards was the performance of Tilden against Lucien E. Williams of Chicago. The champion won, but not until three sets had been required. The score being 6—4, 5—7, 6—2.

Dr. George King scored the only victory against form when the New Yorker eliminated Brian I. C. Norton of St. Louis, ninth ranking player of the United States, 11—9, 6—0. Takeichi Harada scored an easy victory to make the fourth semi-final bracket over Hugh G. M. Kelleher, 6—1, 6—4.

Dempsey Stops Smith and Big Ballyhoo Grows Louder

THIS is the eighteenth chapter of Jack Kearns' thrilling story in which he replies to the charges of Jack Dempsey. It is the first time that the man who put Jack Dempsey on the pugilistic map tells of his experiences when he was a prize fighter. Read this story every day in the Boston Evening American

By JACK KEARNS
CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

I WELCOMED the chance to clear up Dempsey's record even though there wasn't to be any money worth while in the fight with Jim Flynn at Fort Sheridan. At the same time, winner-take-all was good enough for us and we went after it. There was no money at the fort but reputation was better than the dough right then.

Jack Curley and Tom Jones were managing Flynn and were making quite a fuss over him. I decided that because of what Jones had tried to do to Dempsey in Chicago, I'd not spare his Fireman. Dempsey whaled him down in just 1 minute and 2[illegible] seconds.

Jack Kearns

Half the small crowd was composed of Chicago newspapermen who had come to Racine to see for themselves whether or not I had been bunking them on the Dempsey stuff. Jack opened their eyes. They all admitted that.

He took on Homer Smith, a hard hitter, and knocked [illegible] in one round. The ballyhoo was over big again and then they began to take [illegible] real [illegible] notice of Dempsey. All had [illegible] [illegible] before but when [illegible] Flynn and Smith in a round apiece they began to take plenty of notice.

Leo Flynn had a fellow called Bill Shanks who [illegible] along and run up a record of twenty or [illegible] straight knockouts. Flynn finally changed his name to Brennan. Yes, that's the fellow, big Bill Brennan. He was [illegible] at his best right then and I proposed a match.

We agreed to meet at Milwaukee. Flynn said he would bring him on and the match was closed. Of course Leo was laughing up his sleeve. He didn't mind a bit about slapping over my fellow, especially as Jack was getting more and more publicity every day.

Brennan Rules 2 to 1 Favorite

Brennan was a 2 to 1 favorite over Dempsey [illegible] of the fight. There were many bets that Brennan would stop Dempsey. He had a good reputation around Milwaukee and they were [illegible] hook line and sinker on him to stop my fellow.

Jack Dempsey

It was a whale of a fight. One of the best I ever saw. Dempsey knocked Brennan down in the second round but Bill got up and came back for more.

The end came in the fifth. It came with one of the strangest accidents I've ever seen in a ring. Brennan was hit so hard in that fifth round that the force of the blow broke his ankle. Actually broke it!

I know that it crumpled under him even before he hit the floor. The force of Dempsey's punch had twisted Bill's body around so that the ankle simply had to snap.

Poor Bill, now dead and gone, was on crutches for months after that. When we picked him up we saw that his leg was gone for he couldn't stand on it.

I know of only two other instances like that. Al Neill, the California middleweight, hit Mark Shaugnessey in Tacoma one night and broke his leg in the first round with the first punch of the fight.

Dixie Kid hit Eddie Cain so hard in the preliminary to McGovern and Herrera that his ankle was broken. In this case, however, Cain fell in a sitting position with the leg under him.

Buffalo Promoter Makes Bid

I made plenty of noise out of this latest feat of Dempsey. I flooded the East and West with papers telling of the new wonder who was breaking legs like pipe stems with a single blow. It had [illegible] happened but how I drove it home!

I started on Willard all over again. I blasted him from one end of the country to the other. I would make him fight Jack or quit the ring and I began to think that this latter was what he would do. The stories of Jack's hitting were being laid right before his eyes at every meal. He couldn't duck them.

[illegible]

The news of Dempsey's achievements electrified Charles Murray, the leading promoter at Buffalo. He sent me a rush offer to meet Carl Morris.

I wasn't quite ready for that match for I had put Dempsey in burlesque following the fight with Brennan and he was going big. I was offering $500 to any man who would stay four rounds with Jack.

The old John L. Sullivan stuff revived, but it was a riot. We made quite a little tour and then I took up the matter of the Morris bout with Murray.

The match was closed by wire and I promised to have Dempsey in Buffalo a few days before the fight.

We started on time all right but ran into a blizzard on the way and were snowbound. I'll never forget the morning we finally got into Buffalo. It was the day of the fight and Murray was waiting. He had had no chance to show Dempsey at work in Buffalo and the newspaper boys had about decided that we had run out on the match. It certainly looked that way.

Rather unusual for a fighter to get in on the same day of an important bout and this was important with Buffalo and [illegible].

We went to the Iroquois Hotel. I got Murray on the phone and he came tearing for us.

Bill Brennan

Dempsey lay on the bed resting. And to tell the truth he looked pretty low physically. When Murray came into the room he took one glance at Dempsey and then began to look all over, winding up in the bath room.

All the time he was chattering about the big house and the crowd that we would have had had I brought my man in a few days earlier. [illegible] at Dempsey on the bed again he [illegible] to me and said: "Where's Dempsey?" I thought you said he was in the room. Are you kidding me? Where's Dempsey?"

Jack still lay stretched out on the bed, not giving Murray a tumble. I pointed and said, "Who the devil do you think this is if it isn't Dempsey?"

"What?" shrieked Murray. "You don't mean to tell me that is the fellow who is going to fight Carl Morris, the [illegible]"

Monday Kearns tells how Murray, Buffalo promoter, took one look at Dempsey and wanted to call off fight with giant Carl Morris.

RENT IMPORTANT IN THE BUDGET

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

By MARTHA LEE

THE matter of housing the family of moderate income has really [illegible] problem in this country, and this problem is more acute [illegible] than in the country.

Ever since the war it has taken too great a proportion of our incomes to pay for the type house which meets our modern requirements for health and social efficiency, and all too few of these houses are available at any price.

We have a National Housing Association [illegible] that one-fifth of our income or less should [illegible] amount [illegible] income [illegible] is wiser [illegible] portion.

The abnormally high rents that prevail in housing at the present time make it almost impossible for the city dwellers to conform to this rule. On the other hand, we are faced with the fact that if all the other calls on our income are to be met, one-fifth of the income really should be the limit of what we pay for rent. If we own [illegible] it is [illegible] more than twice the amount of our annual income [illegible].

The choosing of the home is a matter of very great importance, because so many other expenses, such as light, heat, cleaning and other forms of service depend so much on the size of the house and its interior arrangement and finish.

The [illegible] that planned the improved homes for working men during the war told us that no working man's family should afford [illegible] than their actual need [illegible] though the larger [illegible] more [illegible] furnishings, light [illegible] care of the larger house would be proportionately larger.

Good floors, good heating, good cooking ranges and the convenient arrangement of rooms affects economies in labor. Well fitting double windows will help keep down the coal bill, while a poorly built house with rattling windows is expensive to run.

If you are thinking of moving this Fall [illegible] of the new [illegible] from [illegible] children's [illegible].

If [illegible] for instance [illegible] car daily from [illegible] a year must be considered an addition to rent, which often brings the rent of an inconveniently located house up to or exceeding that of a more conveniently located house which apparently carries a higher rent.

Don't forget to consider the value of the time spent [illegible] to and from school and business and the wear and tear of commuting on the worker who lives in the suburbs. These drawbacks must be carefully weighed against the advantages of larger living quarters and healthful surroundings in the country.

Our houses like our clothing really set the family pace; they announce to the world the standard that the family [illegible] to live up to. [illegible] ments may be judged.

The Thrift Budget of the United States Treasury Department allows $300 to $400 a year or about 17 per cent for rent for incomes from $1,800 to $2,400 a year but all of you know how difficult it is to find anything within this sum.

I am told that many important [illegible] are afoot in connection with co-operative home-ownership, such as is practiced in the "Garden Cities" in England and on the Continent, but for the present it seems that we must take what we can get.

A $40 [illegible] would allow you $8 for rent [illegible] business carfares, which is [illegible] you are paying now. It allows you [illegible] for food, whereas it takes [illegible] five [illegible] A $[illegible] [illegible] $3 weekly [illegible] for [illegible] household supplies [illegible] $10 for savings [illegible] per [illegible] personal [illegible] and [illegible] recreation and [illegible] you are short [illegible] really [illegible] your income averages $60 a week? A $60 budget would allow [illegible] $8 for savings including insurance, $8 for rent and business carfares, $[illegible] for [illegible] including milk, $[illegible] for clothing, $5 for operating and $[illegible] for personal.

Mrs. [illegible] received a personal budget some time ago which was a [illegible] but circumstances [illegible] changed and she would [illegible] a new budget. Husband makes $[illegible]75 weekly. They have furnished rooms which include gas, light and heat at $9 a week; pay $5 weekly installments on furniture and $2.65 weekly insurance. Husband's carfares are $1.40 weekly. Have an old bill of $15, which they are anxious to pay. Will try hard to make a success of the new budget. Also asks for book on coffee making.

The book has gone right along to you. I only wish it were as easy to show you how to budget your $29.75. Outgo seems to exceed income. A $[illegible] budget would allow $3 for savings, including insurance. You are now paying $2.65, which leaves you a balance of 35c for the bank.

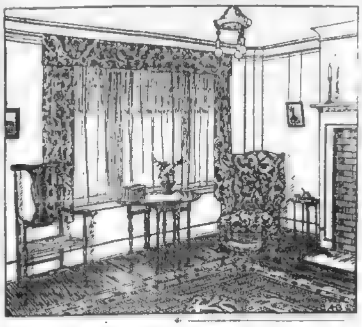
It would give you $10.51 for shelter and business carfares which is about what you are paying. It would also give you $10 for food. In order to make up the weekly installment, you can have $1.50 for clothing and $5 for personal to cover the installment bill. This, however, leaves you nothing for all the other expenses that come under personal, including 50 cents a week which you should be setting aside towards the $15 debt. Can't you have your installments made smaller and extend over a longer period?

Mr. G. H. G. has an income of $150 a month and an allowance of $15 a month for the use of his automobile in business. Is all alone in the world, pays $15 a week for room, board and garage. Insurance is $65.80 annually; owes $200 on car which pays at the rate of $26.50 each month; owes $37 for clothes. Has five new suits and six pairs of shoes in good shape. Taxes on car $10 annually; owes $79 lodge dues $34 annually; has on hands $75. Has had heavy expenses in past two years. Spends considerable for smokes. Will be grateful for a budget.

If I were you I would budget my $150 a month income and lay aside the $15 a month allowance toward the expenses of your automobile. You'll need it; $150 a month is really $34.42 weekly. Of this $15.28 is allowed for your room and business carfares, $5.16 for clothing (I would suggest paying $3 a week of this on the back clothing bill) $3.66 for savings, including $1.23 insurance which is what you are paying weekly; $3.16 for operating which means postage, telephones, shoe shines, shaves, toilet articles and all services, and $7.16 for personal out of which I would pay $2 weekly on the back bill, lodge dues, tobacco, newspapers, magazines, all amusements, church donations and gifts. Every expense of the automobile is supposed to come out of this personal fund, that is why I suggested putting aside the $15 a month towards this item. This would give you $3.40 weekly to add to personal making $10.66 in all.

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore



THIS is a particularly interesting corner as it combines the principal decorative units of the living room—the fireplace and the window.

Its proper treatment presents, however, two difficulties.

First, there is but little wall space against which to arrange the furniture, next the importance of this group is apt to be excessive and throw the rest of the room out of balance.

To obviate the lack of decorative space we must emphasize [illegible] the furniture [illegible]. The importance of the easy chair has been materially increased by using over-draperies to match its upholstery, thus its decorative influence spreads over the whole window area, though its actual size is correctly proportioned to the floor and wall space available.

The Duncan Phyfe footstool and the smoking stand play the part of satellites, and the small picture through a trick of optical illusion increases the apparent size of the wall section.

A gateleg table is always distinctive and ornamental, and is particularly appropriate here to decorate the blank space below the window.

The lyre-back chair anchors down the window which otherwise would assume a peculiar tipped-up appearance, as if the weight of the upholstered chair were actually pulling that end down.

To balance the whole room, some massive arrangement should be devised for the opposite corner. A baby grand piano with a tapestry panel hung above would serve the purpose excellently.

Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

WHAT is the treasure men would claim, prizing it more than gold? What is the gift which they would name could they but choose and hold? "Happiness! Happiness!" all men cry, "This is the gift divine, this the one star in a cloud-swept sky, this is life's fragrant wine." Seeking it near and seeking it far over the world they go, happiness shining like morning star, happiness all would know. Folly goes roving far and wide wandering day and night; happiness waits by [illegible] side could [illegible] but see aright. "Happiness! Happiness!" all men cry. "This is the gift divine!" Why do they look to the cloud-filled sky? Nearer its gleams shine! Happiness flees not afar [illegible] strange land and sea, here it waits patiently day by day under your own rooftree.

Dr. Reed Gives Warning to Vacation Bathers

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

THE season is again at hand when many [illegible] of people of the north temperate zone—you probably among them—betake themselves to the shore for the bathing.

There is a lot about sea bathing that you and all others who indulge in it ought to take into consideration.

It is well to remember that besides water and salt the sea contains [illegible] quantities [illegible] organic [illegible] general [illegible] of magnesium [illegible] lime, together with [illegible] rare metals including [illegible].

The sea is therefore a most valuable mineral water, containing stimulants, sedatives and radio-active substances.

Its average saltiness (salinity) is 35 per cent, and unless it has been contaminated from the land, it is quite germ free.

Few bathers realize, when they are swimming how many good things are happening to them all at once. In the first place the salt is stimulating the nerve endings in the skin, although no salt is absorbed through the skin. Through the nerve centres the nerves that regulate the nutritive processes are stimulated.

The temperature and movement of the water are also excellent tonics [illegible] exercise [illegible] to keep his head above water.

Last, but not least, he is exposed to the [illegible] sunlight [illegible] reflection from the surface of the water.

Healthy people react quickly to the temperature of the water, but individuals vary very much in the minimum temperature to which they can react successfully. No one should go in the sea when it is below his personal minimum temperature, and for some people it is bad to bathe in cold water at all. The condition to avoid is the dangerous one of the shivering reaction, for this shows that the body has lost more heat than it can comfortably afford.

Healthy people will avoid it by going into the water all over at once, and coming out while they are still glowing. Weaker people should not subject themselves to this risk.

[illegible] his personal requirements in the way of duration, temperature, time of day and amount of swimming exercise. This [illegible] largely on age and physical condition.

The best time to bathe is after a good meal has been properly digested, but not when the stomach is full nor when it is quite empty.

To avoid chill after the dip, it is best to dry vigorously and, unless the day is warm, to take a little exercise to avoid exhaustion. After [illegible] on it [illegible] to take a little food.

[illegible] valuable in [illegible] way, but few people take [illegible] of the beneficial effect of a sea voyage is due to [illegible] baths. To begin [illegible] the water as long as he [illegible].

The stimulation is less rapid and [illegible] can be regulated, and the [illegible] the skin and the [illegible] extremely good [illegible].

Apart from [illegible] sea baths, the sea air is a most valuable medicine, for it [illegible] and ozone and, because of its high humidity, it does not change rapidly in temperature. It is also a very good conductor of light.

Jeritza Tells How to Keep the Hair Beautiful

By Maria Jeritza

SUMMER TIME brings its own hair problems. Very often hot weather seems to have an unfortunate [illegible] though it should be at its best during this season when it gets plenty of fresh air and sunlight.

But salt water may rob your tresses of their lustre, and sun baths, although beneficial to the scalp, sometimes [illegible] the hair. If you are wise, even though you stay outdoors all you can, you will protect your hair from the brilliant sunshine. This is easy luckily, since parasols are in fashion. Under a big beach umbrella, your bare head will get all the good and none of the bad effects of fresh air and sunshine.

If your hair is even dampened with salt water after a sea-bath, even though the salt water has dried [illegible] your scalp [illegible] in clean fresh water, because salt water left in the hair makes it harsh and dull-looking. Remove your rubber bathing cup as soon as you leave the water. Rubber causes the scalp to perspire and is injurious to the hair.

Careful shampooing is most important in summer when dust and perspiration combine to make the hair unattractive.

If you have [illegible] should be [illegible].

If you keep your health at its best, and avoid using artificial preparations on your hair, it should retain its natural wave so that you will look your very best even in damp weather and climates. A permanent wave will solve the problem of a becoming coiffure for straight hair. But if your hair is very straight and you can't have a permanent wave and simply must look your best, and your marcel refuses to stay in because of the dampness you [illegible] following simple formula.

Mix one tablespoon of bruised quince seed with [illegible] of hot water. [illegible] with a few drops of essence of violets. Apply this fluid very sparingly to your hair before putting it in curlers or applying an iron. It is intended for emergencies, rather than for every [illegible] used in this way, it will prove harmless, will help you to retain your wave even in dampest weather, and also add shining gloss to your hair.

Martha Lee's Pointers and Recipes

AND still they come: The request for more and "different" sandwich fillings. And here they are:

CELERY AND HAM — Finely chopped celery, chopped stuffed olives, deviled ham and mayonnaise make a luscious sandwich filling. One-quarter cup finely chopped green peppers can be substituted for the chopped olives.

CHICKEN AND HAM—Spread a slice of chicken with a little mayonnaise and lay it on a thin slice of toast; spread the other half with deviled ham and press firmly together.

DATE AND NUT—Remove stones from dates and put through food chopper with equal quantity of walnuts, moisten with mayonnaise and spread between thin slices of white bread.

CHOPPED HAM—Chop cold boiled ham fine and moisten with tartar sauce; spread on white bread.

WALES SANDWICHES—To one-third of a cup of butter, creamed, add one-half cup each of finely chopped cold boiled ham and cold boiled ham and cold boiled or roasted chicken, season with salt and pepper.

DATE AND PEANUT—Remove the stones and finely chop dates (or figs), add a little water and cook to a juice to taste, let cool; spread on thin slices of buttered bread; then sprinkle with finely chopped peanuts before covering with the second slice.

PILGRIM SANDWICHES — Use your favorite recipe for milk and water bread, using entire wheat flour and adding one and one-half tablespoons of molasses; after first rising add while kneading one-half cup of finely chopped candied orange peel and one-half cup of broken nut meats. Fill one-pound buttered baking powder tins one-third full of this mixture, let rise and bake; cool and use for sandwich filling.

FAVORITE JELLY—Remove the crusts from finely sliced bread, toast and cut in triangles. Beat together butter and currant jelly until it will spread evenly. Spread one-half the slice with English walnut meats and serve on hot plates.

Turn about is fair play. Haven't you some favorite sandwich filling that you could pass along for Exchange Day? I would love to have them and so I am sure would the 33,568 members of the Martha Lee Club.

Faithfully as ever,

Martha Lee

The Taxi Dancer by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

A Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; A Mad Whirl of Adventure

Joslyn Poe, daughter of a proud, but impoverished Virginia family, wants a career, not marriage. Her mother wants her to wed. The wild blood of a line of daring women runs in her veins. She wants adventure. A seeress tells her of the "wildness" in her blood. She goes to a dance. She determines she will settle her problem that night—to marry George Ransom, well-to-do, but no dandy, or—go to New York in seek of adventure. She meets a stranger at the dance.

Milton Stein, the stranger, advises Joslyn to go to the city and to dance. Joslyn, hungry and discouraged, is heard weeping by Kittie Lane, a manicurist. Kittie gets Lee Rogers, a friend, to invite them to dinner.

While the girls are at the table with Rogers, James Kelvin, movie star, attempts to cultivate Joslyn's acquaintance. There is a near row with Rogers. Kelvin goes away leaving with Joslyn a sense of some strange influence over her. A few days afterward Kittie is brought home blind from bad booze. Joslyn rushes to Stein's Academy to take a job as a "Taxi Dancer" to care for Kittie. In the academy she meets Stephen Bates, a man-about-town, who offers to go to Kittie's help.

Kittie's life and sight are saved by the doctors secured by Bates. They both go to a party at Bates'. Kelvin is there. He kills Bates in a quarrel.

Kittie saves Joslyn by telling the police that the death row was over her.

With Kelvin hiding in her apartment Joslyn is called by the district attorney. She bests him. Police watch her flat. She quarrels with Lee Rogers.

When Lee offers to help her with cash, without strings, Joslyn has a change of heart.

Joslyn yields to Kelvin. He stirs her deeply.

CHAPTER VII.

JOSLYN awoke. Sunshine stream[illegible] the little parlor and she was [illegible] Her [illegible] back to her last waking [illegible] She had gone to sleep with [illegible] holding her hand as he sat [illegible] the bed.

Outside there had been a detective watching the apartment on a long chance [illegible] the movie actor might try to visit her.

A glance at the door connecting the parlor and the room where Kelvin slept showed that it was closed; that he still was asleep.

Her first move was to go quickly to the window. Across the street, loitering near the entrance of the opposite building, was a square-built man looking at a newspaper and smoking a cigar. The watcher of the night before was nowhere visible, but Joslyn knew, at the first glance, that this man, too, was of the police. The guard had been changed.

For a moment she was stabbed with chagrin and apprehension, but almost at once her intelligence gave her reassurance. Kelvin's presence in her flat was not suspected—otherwise there would have been a raid. It was merely that they thought he might come!

"But we're perfectly safe," she told herself. "They haven't the [illegible]"

[illegible] zest of adventure.

The whole affair had struck some hitherto silent chord in Joslyn's nature and her whole being strummed with a new exciting happiness. Audacity brought verve to the dainty breakfast she prepared and ate with Kelvin. His dark eyes had grown somber with worry, he needed a shave but his spirits were on the rise.

The headlong spirit of adventure carried her through the unfamiliar business of shopping for his suit and haberdashery. By the time the purchases were delivered she was back home to receive them. Kelvin's feelings rose appreciably at the sight of a razor and new clothes. When he made his toilette and appeared before Joslyn he looked ten years younger.

"Let me see you—turn around."

'Are We Not a Nice Looking Couple?' She Demanded of Him

She was possessively proud of the well-groomed effect. Her choice of linen and necktie had been faultless; in the dark gray suit Kelvin's tall figure was almost fashion-plate in its style, for the actor had the knack of wearing clothes well. Indeed, apart from his dark, magnetic [illegible] was his natural [illegible] in the matter of dress that accounted largely for his past screen success.

In the bathroom door was set a long mirror and Joselyn, with undisguised vanity, led Kelvin before it and stood beside him.

"Now, [illegible] look at us, are we not a nice looking couple?" she demanded [illegible] "Of course this little dress of mine isn't such a riot [illegible]—but I flatter myself that I got by the censors with about 25 per cent to spare. Quiet and [illegible] for a slogan?"

[illegible] he bent and kissed the pretty little girl beside him.

"Joslyn! Joslyn! How you've flamed up since that first night I met you. You were like a little frieghtened mouse then—"

"And now?"

"Feminine beauty incarnate!"

Kelkin took her in his arms and looked down with smouldering eyes at her thrown-back face. A thousand times he had held other women so on the stage and before the camera—the posture and the language came so easily to him that, in all honesty, he did not know where the theatre left off and reality began.

"In all the world there's no one like you, Joslyn dear, no one like you. You are life to me, the very breath of life itself. When I first saw you my heart turned over. You've saved my life—sheltered me from a world where every hand is raised to strike me down. Do you wonder dear that I love you—love you—love you."

"I ought to hate myself—and I [illegible]"

"There is no such thing as tomorrow!" asserted Kelvin hotly. "There is only the present—and you!"

'You Make Love So Wonderfully,' She Told Him, as She Trembled

"No wonder a million girls were crazy about you. You make love so wonderfully," she fold him. "And to think that I have you here—locked up—all for my very own." Despite a slight trembling she still had a strong grip on herself and she was able to pull apart from him.

Kelvin clung to her hands. "Isn't what we both really want—to plunge into forgetfulness—to the uttermost?"

J[illegible] was fighting every inch of the way, smiled wryly. "There's rent to be paid and food to be bought—for our desert isle. One of us must be practical. The money you gave me to buy your clothes about cleaned you out, didn't it?"

"Why yes, but—" his confidence suddenly grew startled. "Why—it's just occurred to me I've got plenty of money in the bank but I can't get to it—you wouldn't dare cash my check—"

"I thought of all that yesterday," Joslyn said. "You see, I'm real smart. But don't worry. I make plenty at Stein's to pay the bill—"

"I can't let you support me!" Kelvin declared, shocked, seizing her by the wrist.

"You can't help yourself—it's got to be done. Why not? And that reminds me that I didn't show up for work last night—and the rent's about due. I'll have to phone Stein and explain."

She called the dancing academy and heard Stein's voice answering.

"I'm sorry, Miss Poe . . . we can't use you any more . . . A place like this can't afford newspaper notoriety . . . we're in bad enough already and the welfare hounds would shut us up like a trap. Sorry."

'Tarnished Wings'; Begin This Story Today

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XL.

Copyright, 1926, Johnson Features, Inc.

FOR the first time in her life Merry had a friendship with a man, a friendship with not one bit of love making mixed up in it.

John Benson was in town for a week and he saw Merry every day. But not once did he hold her hand in a moving picture show, or kiss her in a speeding taxi, or even mention the fact that he had fallen in love with her picture, long before.

He did none of the things that Merry, who knew too much about men, expected a man to do when he was with her.

From the minute she told him that she was engaged to marry Bill Erskine, he began to keep his distance. He behaved toward her exactly as he might have behaved to [illegible] little sister who went to school.

"[illegible] for either a friend or a lover?" she asked herself, time after time. Somehow she just couldn't look ahead and picture herself married to Bill Erskine!

Every day a letter came for her from him. He was planning to spend Christmas with her, "no matter what happened."

"That means, I suppose," she told herself, "that he's coming whether his father dies in the meantime or not."

She took out his last letter now, while she waited for John Benson. There were two snapshots in it—one of himself on a horse, and another of himself and a young girl. They had tennis rackets under their arms and the background showed a tennis court.

"[illegible] there's no reason why I shouldn't step out with John Benson or Les Purcell myself," Merry said to herself, and she went out to meet John, who was just coming into sight.

They went for a long ride. Far [illegible] country where late September was hanging scarlet and gold banners on all the trees.

They Raced Back to Boston With the Wind at Their Backs

The sun went down, the moon came up—a white sickle moon in the silvery green sky of early evening.

"I suppose we ought to eat somewhere," John said, along about 9 o'clock. "We start talking and the time just flies, doesn't it?"

They raced back to town, with the wind at their backs, and had a meal in a little Boylston street restaurant.

"I should be taking you to the restaurant in the Touraine Hotel instead of to a dump like this," John said, opening the door of the little restaurant for Merry.

"I'm enjoying this," she told John Benson, pouring syrup over her crisp golden waffles. "Just as I enjoy your stories about your ranch. Food doesn't make so much difference, does it?—especially when you're having a good time."

"[illegible] having a good time?" he asked eagerly. But the next night he took her to the Touraine Hotel for dinner, and bought her feathery white gardenias to wear on her coat.

"Then, on the next Thursday, his week was over. He was gone, and everything seemed more dreary and dull than before.

Jinny and Derrick came home from their honeymoon on the first Sunday morning in October.

From the sitting room window Moms saw them come, and she dashed out onto the front porch.

"Here!" Here!" she called to Jinny. "Don't go into the Jones' house! Bring your bags in here—I'll give you some breakfast!"

Merry watched Jinny come slowly across the Jones' lawn, and then cross the lawn of their own house and come up the steps to Moms.

"Is Mr. Heffinger here?" she asked shortly.

"Why, no," Moms answered, in a surprised voice. "His show's opened again and he's gone for the Winter. Why?—What has Mr. Heffinger to do with your coming into the house, for heaven's sake?"

Jinny's eyebrows shot up.

"Nothing, except that I won't stay under the same roof with him!" she said, in that frank, positive way of hers. "If you'll swear to me that he's not ever coming back here, Derrick and I will live here with you. Otherwise—nothing doing!"

Moms opened her mouth to argue the question. Then evidently she thought better of it. She laughed.

"Don't be so high-and-mighty, Jinny. I'm not asking you and Derrick to live here with me!" she said briskly. "I just want you to come in and have your breakfast. You look as if you need a good hot bath, too!"

"We've been camping—Derrick and I," she explained. "We bought a tent and we've been sleeping in it and bathing in the rivers—Oo-ooh. We've had the most gorgeous-grand honeymoon two people ever had!"

"You must have! You look it!" Moms answered grimly, and went upstairs to start the hot water running in the tub.

When she had fed Jinny and Derrick with the first well-cooked food they had had for three weeks, she settled the question of Mr. Heffilinger.

He's paid his room rent up until the first of November," she told them, sitting opposite them at the breakfast table. "And it's silly for me to think of turning him out, anyway. For I don't want you two in the house anyway. I don't believe in two families living under one roof—and the sooner Derrick makes a home for you, Jinny, the better it will suit me."

It wound up by Jinny moving all her things over to the Jones' house next door. She and Derrick decided to live there until they had a place of their own.

"Which won't be soon!" as Moms remarked bitterly to Merry. "For as long as Derrick can live on his father he'll do it; you see! I made up my mind I wouldn't have them here. If Miss Jinny was smart enough to leave home because she didn't like having Mr. Heffilinger around the house, she ought to be smart enough to make Derrick provide a home for her! She's too young to be married, anyway!"

Merry could tell that she was dreadfully upset about Jinny, in spite of her hard, ruthless way of talking about her.

She nagged Derrick constantly about getting a home where Jinny could learn to keep house.

"That's no way for her to live—under your mother's thumb, all day," she would say to him.

"Well, I'm under my father's thumb all day," Derrick, who was working in his father's private office, would come back at her. "It's hard on both of us."

But there never was a word of complaint from Jinny. If she disliked living at the Jones house, she never said so. And she never crossed the threshold of her old home unless she came with her new hubarid.

"She acts as if she'd never belonged to me!" Moms would wail.

[illegible] came home, edited.

Helen was going to have a baby in January, and [illegible] affair with Mrs. Fairfield.

"He's seeing her again, a[ll the] time," Cassie confided to Merry, one cold Saturday night in late October. They were driving home in Cassie's little car, with its cut-glass vase [of] clove carnations and its velvet [cover]ed seats.

'Don't Marry a Man Unless He's Head Over Heels in Love'

"Whatever you do Merry," she said in her harsh, husky voice, "Don't marry a man [illegible] head over heels in love with you. Marriage is too close and intimate a thing for anybody but lovers."

"That reminds me, Merry," she went on, "Morley had a letter from Bill Erskine. He expects to spend Thanksgiving here. I suppose he's told you, though, hasn't he?"

"I haven't heard from him for a week," Merry answered. "I don't know what's the matter w[ith him]. He had been writing to me every day."

That night Les Purcell dropped in to see her along about half past eight.

"I'm not going to stay," he said, sitting down in front of the little fire that crackled in the sitting room grate. "I just ran in to tell you something—My wife filed suit for divorce today."

He said it just like that—naturally and simply. He might have been saying: "I bought a new suit today" or "It was cold today, wasn't it?"

Merry's green eyes blinked at him, like green jewels winking in the dimness of the firelit room.

"My soul! Lillie was right, then!" she muttered, half to herself. "But why didn't you tell me you had a wife, Les? You've never mentioned her."

"Why should I have talked about her? I haven't lived with her for more than a year, honey," he drawled in his lazy way. "I try not to think of unpleasant things."

Merry stared at him. The little room was very silent. The whole house was silent, except for the ticking of the clocks and the coals crackling in the grate. Moms and Lillie had gone out.

"I never should have married her in the first place," Les went on, talking about himself as usual. "I'm not the kind of man who should try to stick to a woman and a home. I'm not made that way."

"No?" Merry's voice was quiet. "No?"

Les Purcell got up and came toward her. She got up, too. She didn't like the look that had flashed into his face.

"Kiss 'em when you meet 'em and leave 'em when you kiss 'em. But never marry 'em!" Les said in his coarse way, speaking of the whole splendid race of women as if they were toys for the pleasure [illegible]

"That's my system," he finished with a laugh, holding Merry close in his arms. "I'm going to leave [illegible] I'm going to kiss you, Paradise!"

"Not if I see you first!" Merry cried, full of sudden dislike toward him.

There came a sharp [tapp]ing on the window beside them.

To Be Continued Monday.

Whose is the face at the window, why is Merry so frightened? You will find the answers in Monday's chapter of "Tarnished Wings."

The Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

"[illegible] be speaking [illegible] Le creature, one had to [be] very cautious with her [illegible]

[illegible] her don't you know the way I did [illegible] the point of desperate foolish[ness] [illegible]

"Why [illegible] one night be?" I asked severely.

Bertie Langard looked at me with wide-eyed innocence. It was hard to tell whether his look betokened [illegible] neighborhood suspects him or if it was his shrewd [illegible] would have called "Jammy."

"Why don't you think it might [illegible]" [illegible] asked.

"You mean Jim?" I gasped.

[illegible] Don't you think yourself it's likely it would have been [illegible] Jimmie?" [illegible] to cry out.

"You're crazy."

But this is what so many folks think and [illegible] seemed a most criminal to put this thought into [illegible] crazy for suggesting that Jim might have loaned Arlette the money to get away. After all, hadn't I gone around fearing to face my own thoughts on the matter—my thought that Jim might know more than he wished to say about the disappearance of Arlette Valeau?

"[illegible] Jim were the last to see [illegible]" was what I finally said when I [had] composed myself.

"[illegible] to see her," Bertie said proudly.

"What [illegible]" I explained, choking back the question that came leaping to my lips.

[illegible] her. And I found she'd just finished cleaning up after those balls [illegible] earnestness with which Bertie Lingard replied.

"[illegible] Yes, of course [illegible] It's [illegible] quite a bit. And, I think you'll say [illegible]"

"You mean what she said then put it in your head that she might [illegible]"

"Yes. She knew I loved her. I think I told her. And we were [illegible] always doing such [illegible] bile tours for poor children. [illegible]"

She [illegible] carefully and asked me a lot of questions and it was then [illegible]

"[illegible] anything special [illegible] anything to make you [illegible] think. Try to recall."

Bertie Lingard screwed up his face into a gargoyleish twist in his efforts to think. But [illegible] in vain, for he only shook his [head] and said he wasn't at all sure. [illegible]

[illegible] I asked suddenly.

"Oh, no, they didn't bark," said Bertie all vagueness again.

"Of course not. They knew Arlette so well. I suppose you left her at the gate."

"She made me leave her a bit down the road," Bertie said proudly. "[illegible] wouldn't let me go all the way" . . .

I gasped in horror as the thought of tramps flashed into my head. This was a new and horrible complication I had never considered. But it had to be reckoned with now. And so it seemed more than ever [illegible]

"I have an important visit to [illegible] to take [illegible] go at [illegible] It's urgent. [illegible] for Nicholas Perry?" He has been demanding a ride and I can't work him in. [illegible] Lingard, [illegible]

In this way I got rid of Bertie without betraying to him that I was going over to see May. It seemed [illegible] so urgent [illegible] a traitor [illegible]

[illegible] had been more fully fifteen minutes. I wanted to give him plenty of time to call for Nick and return our way without meeting me if it chanced that [illegible] direction. Then I locked the house and ran out to the garage to get the lit[tle] [illegible] Perry and when Jim and I ran for Nick whose injured hands rendered him [illegible]

The garage door stuck a bit when I tried to open it. At last I man[aged] [illegible] the street had a yawning emptiness. There was no sign of the car. But [illegible] green scarf that belonged to the kasha ensemble suit Nicholas Perry had bought for Arlette.

To Be Continued Monday.

DO YOU KNOW-

A race war is raging in California and State authorities, far from trying to pacify the combatants, are adding to the slaughter by endeavoring to poison them—namely, dark-brown Argentine ants and their red skin opponents, the fire ants. Fifteen years ago entomologists predicted the energetic Argentine ant would crowd out all other breeds and become sole survivor of the ant race in California. Late bulletins from the front indicate that while the prophecy has not fully come to pass [illegible]

DO YOU KNOW AS MUCH AS YOUR CAT?

She's a knowing cat.

She asks for little—just her meals, a saucer of milk and a place in the sun. She gets plenty of sleep and exercise. She never worries, never frets. What is the result? Such vitality and resistance that we say, "Cats have nine lives."

What does your cat do when she is not well? She eats catnip, if she can find it. She eats grass and certain green plants to which her instinct leads her.

Your cat takes herbs for a tonic.

Did you ever stop to think that Old Mother Nature, who supplies the herbs necessary to your cat's health, has also provided the herbs necessary to your own well being?

You don't have to hunt for them as the cat does. The herbs you need are skillfully blended and compounded in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, an old-fashioned tonic that will help to restore your energy.

Feels Better Now

Mrs. Gust Green of 401 Lincoln Park Boulevard, Rockford, Illinois, writes: "I was weak and run-down but the Vegetable Compound has helped me and I feel better now. I recommend it to all women who need more strength."

For more than fifty years this medicine has been taken by women with very satisfactory results.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

THIS is [illegible] season all over [illegible] and every housewife [illegible] in the [illegible] average.

ONE woman has a novel idea. She coaxes the [illegible] her husband's bald head [illegible] them with a hammer.

SHE not only destroys the flies but she gets rid of his dandruff.

HE doesn't have to use any grease to make his hair stay in place.

HE gets a permanent wave with every blow.

HIS skull is so full of bumps that his head looks like a detour.

UP to date he's had 10,000 headaches. This means that his wife has killed 10,000 flies.

HE doesn't mind her hitting him on the skull with a hammer because it's such a pleasant sensation when she misses.

NO matter how much a man loves his wife, being socked on the summit gets monotonous.

IT must be wonderful, though, going through life with nothing on your mind but a hammer.

HE ought to polish his bald head with wax so that the flies would slip off and break their necks.

BUT flies are smart, and if he tried this, they'd dip their feet in molasses first.

HE should be glad they don't bring their skates along.

GNATS are so anxious to get into the house that in some cases they come up to the front porch and ring the doorbell.

ONE fly used to fool the people by dipping in the ketchup and disguising himself as a lightning bug.

HE'S so smart you can't even catch him with fly paper. He was born before the first copy was ever printed.

THERE'S only one way to get rid of flies. Put screens on all the doors and windows and then move away somewhere and don't leave any forwarding address.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A TRIP TO PARIS

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

ROSA could still see him as he was on the morning she left—a big animal of a man, handsome as a god yet passionate as a devil, a man whom women craved to fondle, a man to whom women were as essential as meat and drink. But Rosa had hoped she was the only one, because he had called her wife.

Yet she should have known better, she told herself with the bitterness that had eaten deeper into her on the way across to France—and freedom. She should have realized that when Christie was away from her so much there must have been other women. Women sought him, even to lure him away from her side.

In the years of the war—in France—had he been faithful to her? In long ramblings alone over Europe in the course of his work as correspondent for the Amalgamated Press, had he been her man and hers alone? She had hoped so, and believed in spite of her knowledge of his amorous nature that no other than she had felt the power of his love.

It was Anna Greer who caused her first positive doubt of Christie's fidelity, Anna Greer whom one had known and the world had known to hold herself cheap.

One night, a radiant June at the beach cottage of the [illegible] Belbers, when Rosa [illegible] the never-ceasing desire [illegible] love, she had walked alone [illegible] beach to find him.

She found him. And Anna Greer, as best she could see in the moonglow, was [illegible] was pulling his head down to kiss him. Before either he or Anna [illegible] any the words they [illegible] hard to say, Rosa had spoken.

"I might have seen long ago that you were weary of me, that once the youth of me that had won you had passed, you would turn to others. And you have turned to many others or you would not pick out such a—such a woman as this. I hate you!"

It was Anna Greer who answered. Christie stood idly by though her words had deprived him of all powers of speech.

"Enough!" Christie had found tongue at last. "Neither of you is worthy of a man's love. You are not, Rosa, because you doubt too readily. You think that I—"

"I think you did not live a life exactly ascetic in the long periods you were away from me. Even to myself, before this, I would not admit it. But knowing you, I know your passions. I do doubt you. And when I find you with this——"

Christie had walked away, leaving the two women to glare [illegible] for a moment like deserted cats, then betake themselves in directions as nearly opposite as was conducive to a return to the cottage.

The next morning Rosa left for the city bent on taking boat for Paris and a speedy divorce. She had not spoken to Christie. She went early. He was sleeping in an armchair in the lounge room of the cottage, his great blond head tilted like that of a boy who had fallen asleep while sorrowing.

In his hand he held still a blackened briar from which he had been drawing nepenthe. Ordinarily the picture of him slumbering there would have made her laugh and filled her with tenderness for him.

But the parting glance she gave was one of renunciation and unreasoning grief. She left no word to tell him of where she was going or what she planned to do.

Her first move on reaching Paris was to look up the Gilman-Royce family. She found George and Ada and the two poodles at a wretched sort of villa in the vicinity of Fontainebleau.

They were not inquisitive people. The news that she was over for a divorce astonished them no more than if her sole purpose in coming had been the acquiring of hats and gowns.

"Oh, everyone gets a divorce . . . at least, all the visiting Americans," said George. "If for nothing else, then just for the sake of having something worth while to show for their stay."

"I think it is a stunning idea," remarked Ada, who could get enthusiastic over a corpse. "Won't Christie be surprised. And won't all the other women just flock around him. No one could wring a smile from him when you were near, Rosa."

Rosa did not like that, but she was determined to be free of him. There is nothing more determined than a red-headed woman, especially if she plans on doing something that causes herself the most pain.

The Gilman-Royces knew everyone, respectable and notorious, worth knowing in Paris. The first evening of Rosa's visit they introduced her to the respectable family and promised her a delightful few minutes meeting the other class.

The Gilman-Royces, however, did not know much about getting a divorce. They had enjoyed a good divorce themselves when separation meant more than front-page headline for a day; but now they considered it rather bad form and steered Rosa to someone who could better advise her.

Corinne d'Arnois was called the most beautiful and the least virtuous woman in Paris, which made her most welcome among the English-speaking people, perhaps because they could not understand what her own countrymen said about her.

Rosa found Corinne a woman to whom she could open her heart and tell things at which the Gilman-Royces would have giggled.

"Ah!" said Corinne. "Then you are not Miss Rosa King simply. You have anticipated the divorce, hein? Eh bien, one is not to be blamed for waiting to get rid of one's husband. I have no husband.

There are many who wished! There was one who [illegible] everything I could [illegible] Dieu, but he was magnificent [illegible] offer myself to him [illegible]

"Marriage I did not [illegible] what I thirsted for from [illegible] love, kisses, his big [illegible] me. Just for his kiss I [illegible] my soul. He would [illegible] me.

"I tried to kiss [illegible] would not take me [illegible] away [illegible] down. For that I [illegible] try to kiss boots.

"And [illegible] ugly [illegible] times [illegible] have killed themselves [illegible] kicked away.

"That was just six months ago. He went back to America and the last words I hear him say are:

" 'You make me suffer [illegible] torments because you are lovely and go to my head like wine. But what I feel for you is what I feel for any beautiful woman . . . It is not love.

" 'Even such as it is I cannot give it to you. I go back . . . to . . . maison . . . the same name as your own, n'est-ce pas? . . . I go back to Rosa!' "

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE---By HELEN ROWLAND

The Woman's Magazine and the Woman's Page contain all the really vital news of the world. For instance, it is much more vital and important to know what to do for the baby's croup, than it is to know how the Rhinelander case came out, or what Peggy Joyce is going to marry next.

* * *

It is far more vital to know how to get a husband, or how to get spots off the carpet or how to keep your nose from peeling, than it is to know that the President had his old straw hat cleaned again.

* * *

But, what this world really needs at this psychological moment is a MAN'S MAGAZINE, as I have already suggested several times.

There are hundreds of personal problems that men have to work out for themselves, all by their little lonies, when just a word of expert advice would save them hours of labor, worry and heartache.

* * *

How To Make Two Women Perfectly Happy At The Same Time.

How to Get your Wife to Make You a Regular Allowance Out of Your Salary.

How to Read a Newspaper After a Woman Has Folded It.

The Art of Making Beautiful Cravats From Daughter's Old Silk Stockings.

What to Sing—When You Warble at Your Bath.

Fifty-Seven Ways of Telling a Woman You Love Her—Without Getting Into a Breach of Promise Suit.

New Alibis for Old.

Dear me, I could go on forever! There are so many of these vital, intimate things in which men are passionately interested. Why are all the men's magazines filled just with sports and pictures of bathing beauties? Why doesn't somebody start a REAL "Man's Magazine"?

EASTERN MASS. FARE RAISE IS POSSIBLE

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Trustee Arthur G. Wadleigh of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway has intimated that higher fares will follow if the blue uniformed men get an increase in wages. This recalls to the writer that, when the last increase was granted the men, the $1 zone tickets good for sixteen rides were reduced to fifteen rides, as they are at the present time. Boston Elevated patrons, who pay a dime for fare, would like to be able to buy tickets at this rate.

Malcolm Kerlin A. G. Wadleigh

Trustee Wadleigh was formerly chairman of the trustees. He is a former newspaper man. It is interesting to note that he succeeded Homer Loring, now Boston & Maine chairman, who resigned his Eastern Massachusetts post back in 1922. Mr. Wadeigh has been a consistent opponent of higher fares.

* * *

A good many people wonder why Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway common stock, paying no dividend, sells around $56 a share on the Boston Stock Exchange. Of course it is because payment of dividends, with perhaps a generous slice of back dividends, is expected in some quarters.

July 10 we printed the following suggestions: "That triple holiday started a week ago in State and Wall Streets by eliminating the usual abbreviated two-hour weekend session was what the old-time reporter would have named a 'huge success.' There is no particuarly good reason why every Summer Saturday shoud not be a stock market holiday. The big department stores long ago set the precedent with unqualified approval. It has since been followed by many others. The governors of the New York Stock Exchange are naturally slow to upset the long-established custom of Saturday short sessions, but they are likely to be forced to adopt within a few years at the most the idea here advanced of having every Summer Saturday a stock market holiday."

Malcolm Kerein, chief of the U. S Bureau of Efficiency, indorses the idea, urging that it be extended to have a five-day work week during the Summer in all industries where it is found practical.

"Having made another toll bridge free, perhaps New Hampshire could induce the Boston & Maine Railroad to run some busses over it," says the Boston Transcript, referring to the New Castle, N. H., bridge. As a matter of fact a bus line has been running over this bridge all the year around for more than 15 years.

Over the historic New Castle toll bridge E. C. Stedman, the stock broker poet, used to journey to and from his Summer home in the island town. The bridge, by the way, was not long ago repaired with live oak planks, or part of the consignment used to build the valiant old Kearsarge that sank the Confederate commerce destroyer Alabama.

* * *

In connection with a story of alleged embezzlement at the Citizens' National Bank, a reporter writes: "Mr. Stephen is a rather quiet man. It was known that he was employed in a Boston bank, but which one his closest neighbor did not know. There are a number of men in his immediate vicinity, it turned out, that are working in Boston banks, but beyond that fact nobody knows anything about them." We quote from the immortal Sherlock Holmes: "Watson, what do you make of this?"

SHOE AND LEATHER FAILURES FALL OFF

WHOLE WORLD IS DISCUSSED

By NORMAN HAPGOOD
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Williamstown, July 31.—These meetings of the Institute of Politics have the reputation of growing warmer as the various intellectual bouts accumulate. At any rate two rather lively affairs were pulled off.

Russia has a way of stirring things up. In his round table conference, Arthur K. Kuhn, president of the American branch of the International Law Association, in a careful way approached the question of whether we can safely recognize a country with laws like those which prevail among the Soviets. A fusilade of questions and observations spread the subject all over the earth.

It has recently been up in one form in Mexico.

NOR IN ITALY.

The courts are not much more free from political influence in Italy than they are in Russia. What is the present policy of the State Department toward the effort of the Chinese and the Turks to get rid of foreign interference with their machinery of justice? Various countries in South America are pounding away trying to bring about agreements by which recognition of new governments shall be less capricious and therefore less of a club by which the American government can decide what direction shall be taken by the revolution industry.

These round-table conferences are like graduate courses in world's events. Whatever may happen to Russia and recognition by the end of the course, the subject remained in status quo at the end of the debate. Nor did a brisk survey later of the role of newspapers in the march of civilization bring about any device for immediate improvement.

GET RID OF POLITICS.

Dr. A. Mendelsohn-Bartholdy, of Hamburg, Germany, pointed out the extraordinary effect on European thought being exercised by our new immigration policy, with its quota discriminations. The learned doctor thinks that if we got rid of politics and talk there would be a northern group of peoples, including Brittany Finland, the Baltic States, Poland Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, not less naturally working together than the Mediterranean people or those of the Balkans or those of the Peninsula on which are located Spain and Portugal. However, nothing was done to abolish either talk or politics.

PLAN FOR BIG SUGAR PLANT IN CT. DENIED

Judge Levi P. M. Hickey, vice-president and director of field service department of Connecticut Valley Tobacco Association, says he attaches no weight to the reported plan of Great Eastern Sugar Co. to erect a $1,500,000 beet sugar plant in Connecticut if tobacco growers would raise necessary beets. He said sugar situation was worse, if, anything, than the tobacco situation as regards oversupply.

TODAY

dwelling, whistling carelessly, on his way to keep an appointment with another, younger, more interesting, exciting woman.

The wife, left at home, had spent her money, youth and strength caring for her reverend husband. Grown old and gray, she stays at home, and he goes whistling through the gate to meet another woman.

Justice should disregard sentiment. But whatever may be proved, it will not be easy to convince a jury that the accused woman should be put to death.

THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT, fearing revolution in connection with enforcement of its anti-clerical laws, will disarm all Catholics. No Mexican may carry a weapon without a permit, and homes of prominent Catholics are watched by detectives to prevent secret meetings.

DISPATCHES from Washington suggest that the government may lift the embargo that prevents shipping firearms and other weapons into Mexico from the United States. If the embargo is lifted it will be impossible for the Mexican government to disarm Catholics. Lifting the embargo would send unlimited supplies of firearms across the American border.

WHEN THE TROUGH is full of pig food, you hear little squealing in the pen—the pigs are busy and contented.

When wages are high, and jobs plentiful, you hear little discontented radical talk that organized capital calls "Bolshevism."

Motormen and switchmen on a New York subway wanted more money, and should have had it. They were forced to work seven days a week to earn $38, not enough to pay rent and feed a family at New York prices.

THEY STRUCK, were thoroughly and promptly beaten by the corporation, and a few were beaten by the police. Now they march humbly back to their jobs, glad to get back.

They struck at the wrong time. Men can't win a strike unless other men sympathize with them. Wages are high, the crowd is in a hurry to get home and start the radio. This is not a good time for a strike.

KRISHNAMURTI reaches Ommen, Holland, in his stately progress. Solemnly you are told that this young Hindu's body is inhabited "by the same Christ spirit which occupied the body of the Man Jesus."

Mrs. Annie Besant, sponsor of this good-looking young Asiatic, says the Divine Spirit occupies that Hindu body, more and more frequently.

"You can tell when the Spirit is in Krishnamurti by the expression in his face."

It is different presumably from the expression that is his when he plays tennis in white flannels.

MANY CHRISTIANS will denounce the Krishnamurti cult as blasphemy, but Jesus would not resent it. The humblest, most miserable man was to Him as His brother, sharing in His spirit.

The only important thing about Krishnamurti is his demonstration of the fact that some of the people not only CAN be fooled but insist upon being fooled.

C. F. SESSINGER, representing a company that furnishes bonds for honesty of employes, says: "Ninety per cent. of the people in this country are potential crooks."

Experience tells him that necessity, plus opportunity, will show nine out of ten to be thieves.

The percentage is high, but not much too high. Our early barbarian ancestors, our more recent semi-barbarian grandfathers, were marauders and killers, and took pride in that work. We are only 12,000 years from the late stone age now, and it will take a million years of universal prosperity to make us all 100 per cent. honest.

The brute and the bandit survive, to some extent, in every brain. Zola said: "Every man has in himself a hog asleep."

The late Professor Shaler, who taught geology to the Harvard boys, says in his book, "The Mob," that with sufficient provocation, any gathering of clergymen could be transformed into a lynching mob. Our civilization is much less than skin deep.

Not To Be Sneezed at

Hay Fever Causes Annual Loss to Business That Can Be Only Roughly Calculated

Hay fever is a favorite theme for the jokemakers at this season of the year. The tall goldenrod, distinct from the low variety, is getting ready to scatter its invisible "sneeze powder" over the New England waysides.

The annual loss to business by hay fever can only be roughly calculated. Imagine how much disturbance an innocent-appearing bunch of goldenrod could cause at a gathering of bosses "in conference."

Hay fever is no joke to the sufferer, be he banker, business man or broker.

No need to attend the clinics in New York, where they are inoculating victims.

Inoculation against hay fever has been successfully practised for years by at least one Weymouth physician. No doubt today scores of Greater Boston doctors are prepared to give you relief, if you have hay fever.

Oil Crowding Coal

That Worries British Miners

"COAL" CHANGING TO "OIL." A DANGEROUS CHANGE FOR BRITISH COAL MINERS AND OWNERS.

The London Graphic prints this picture as a warning to coal miners that have tied up British industry in a long and thus far vain effort to compel owners of the coal mines to pay fair wages.

If a nation or individual cannot get coal to burn, he must burn something else. This picture ingeniously presents the change of "coal" into "oil."

The threat is real. Great Britain is reaching out all over the world for new oil fields. And with few exceptions whatever coal will do OIL will do, and usually do it more economically with less labor cost.

In the field of power, competing with coal and oil, is the "white power," electricity.

The State of Maine is harnessing the vast power of the tide in the Bay of Fundy, a power representing the energy of millions of horses, hitherto going to waste, as Niagara went to waste until lately.

The day is coming when use of coal to create power will seem as foolish as we should now consider use of whale oil, instead of electricity, for light. Once human beings, dependent on whale oil for their lamps, could not imagine how they would get along without it.

Then came kerosene oil, and that was considered wonderful. Then came electric light.

Soon steel will be made directly by the power of electricity, without the use of coal, as railroads and machinery are more and more turning from coal and oil toward electricity.

Eventually coal in the ground and oil, gigantic as are the deposits, must be exhausted. Long before that time men will have learned to use the power of the tides, perhaps even to harness the power of the sun, which is unlimited. And that will be a good day. POWER is WEALTH. By the time we harness tides and the sun we may have become sufficiently civilized to pay men decent wages, and possibly the great men of the world will then be interested in giving happiness to the majority, instead of everlastingly trying to get too much FOR THEMSELVES.

Creator of a New Order

A Tribute by Fred Stone to a Far-Sighted Showman

That was a thrilling story of progress which Fred Stone told in his "Forty Years on the Stage," a serial in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Two decades ago, as he graphically pictured, the best of variety theatres were dingy, ramshackle affairs, unheated, dimly lighted, with no sanitary conveniences and more often than not infested with insects. Pay and status of actors in them was poor; "variety" as a form of entertainment was in evil repute. Small wonder that Mr. Stone says:

> "When I step into some of the E. F. Albee modern super-vaudeville theatres, or some of the new Orpheums of the West, with their fine dressing rooms and baths, electrically lighted, steam heated, nicely decorated and furnished, spotlessly clean, I wonder how I ever lived through my first years in variety."

Furthermore, in those old days a performer who became ill or was stranded—both frequent occurrences—often came to desperate straits before he could get help.

Today a vaudeville artist in trouble has simply to notify the nearest bureau of the "National Vaudeville Artists," of which there are 200, and aid is at once forthcoming.

Twelve thousand members of this organization now enjoy respected careers, receive honorable treatment in their professional work, make use of fine clubhouses in three cities, are cared for in illness and old age and at death have the benefit of $1,000 insurance each, for which the only premium is the annual dues of $10.

This great improvement is chiefly the work of one individual, Edward F. Albee.

In the words of Mr. Stone, now president of "N. V. A.," Mr. Albee

> "changed the status of the variety-performer from that of irresponsible traveling mountebank to that of artist and man."

> "His campaign to clean up vaudeville has resulted in a nationally recognized theatrical institution which provides fine entertainment for men, women and children.
> "Expense does not end with his super-theatres and their appurtenances—he secures for the public the theatres' finest stars and novelties from far corners of the world, and puts them within reach of the workingman's pocketbook.
> "Nor is Mr. Albee's philanthropy confined to the theatre. He is identified with endless State, national and international benefactions. His theatres are not only architectural models and art galleries but they are also forums for all sorts of civic enterprises."

It is a pleasure to spread so true a tribute by one who knows.

EDUCATION SHOULD BE FOR EVERYONE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MR. JOHN E. ANDRUS, Yonkers millionaire, said that ninety per cent. of the graduates of Columbia would not be successful in the various professions.

He said that these people ought to be educated rather for some hard work. Most of the people who engage in the various professions are failures and they had better be sign painters or farmers.

This is an old criticism which has often been leveled at the colleges.

There is some truth in it.

Unfortunately almost all institutions of learning are engaged in the business of turning out professional men, that is, men for white-collar jobs.

Too many mothers regard the school as useful for their children in enabling them to escape from the necessity of manual labor.

Henry Ford says that since the assurance that labor would get a square deal, many more young people are going into wage-earning than formerly.

There is nothing inconsistent in earning one's own living by one's own labor and at the same time being an educated man. To have an education or a broad outlook upon life does not necessarily mean that we are to make a living by it. St. Paul mended sails and Jesus was a carpenter. It was the custom among the ancient Jews to teach all their children some handicraft so that all would be equipped to support themselves in an emergency.

Among a vast number of people only a certain proportion are equipped to make their living by their brainwork. Just how this proportion is to be determined no one knows. It is ultimately done by nature, just as nature determines the relative number of the two sexes.

Doubtless many people are following a professional life and gaining a meager livelihood who would be better off working with their hands. And perhaps some manual laborers could make a success as professionals.

As a rule, however, these things take care of themselves. Every man finds his own level. Some are equipped by nature for manual work and some are properly endowed for intellectual work.

The college should be able to train both classes. It should not aim to make every man a teacher or professor, or even a doctor or lawyer. It should aim to give him that education which would be the most satisfactory groundwork for any kind of life, whether that of a farmer, a storekeeper or a doctor.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"HOW can I stand it?" you cry. "How can I stand this agony which has come?

"How can I get back into life again after this terrible hurt and loss?

"I am as one cut off from every living thing. I am as one mangled—emptied of blood. My very thoughts are like dry, empty bladders drifting on a sea of tears.

"I do not want to eat or sleep, or play, or work, or talk, or walk. I am so drained of all desire I cannot even want to die.

"Yet somehow I must get back. I must take my place again, if only to earn my living. I must resurrect myself. And how can I do it? What great comfort or healing can come to me that will make me able to do this thing? What great shock will thrust me violently back into life? Maybe there is some trick I could learn—some amusement that might awaken me—some creed I could hold to"—

No. There are no tricks—no amusements—no creeds for you in this hour, my friend.

There is only your fighting soul. How will you get back?

START!

Stop waiting for some change to take place in your spirit. That change will never come if you sit idle, waiting for it. ou will have to go after it. You will have to wrest it for yourself from the hard grip of destiny.

So start!

Stand up!

Get ready to work.

Start in Afresh

Stop looking back. Stop reading old letters, weeping over old pictures, clinging to old garments. Stop sobbing into the telephone, pacing the floor, gazing out of the window. Get off that chair. Get out of that bed.

You have hind legs. Stand on them.

You have a mouth that can turn either up or down. Turn it up.

You have feet. Move them forward. Walk out of that room and close the door behind you. Go down stairs, or to your office, grab the first job that presents itself and hang on—not like "grim death," but like far grimmer life.

"But my spirit is screaming and crawling within me," you sob. "It is like a wild animal raving at its bars."

Well, suppose it is.

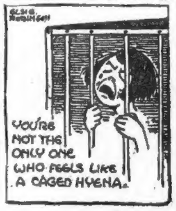
Life must go on, even if wild animals rave at bars. Bread must be baked, letters must be written, lessons must be learned, streets must be paved, though a million wild beasts gnash their teeth, within or without us. And we were given the powerful, subtle machine of the body that this thing might be accomplished.

A man may make his legs go and his fingers move even though a hyena howls at his back, or in his heart.

Prove Your Superiority

Then see to it that your legs go and your fingers move while your hyena howls. If for the time you are a frantic, caged beast, accept the fact and treat your inner self as such. Ignore those howls. Transport that desperate thing within you as calmly and determinedly as you would transport any other wild beast. Prove that you are superior to your own caged fury.

And, as soon as you can get around to it, begin to realize that you are not the first one who has carried a caged fury in his heart. Nearly every soul you meet has known agony as great as yours. That meek, mousey man has mourned his wife as keenly as you mourn your daughter or son. That proud woman has tasted hemlock as darkly bitter as yours. All these human bipeds who pass you on the street are carrying shrieking clamor in their hearts. If their thoughts could suddenly be audible the street would be an inferno of moans and yells, of jeers and insane wailings.



ELSIE ROBINSON
YOU'RE NOT THE ONLY ONE WHO FEELS LIKE A CAGED HYENA.

Then get over the idea that you are the only one who is making a noise inside.

If they can move, you can move.

If they can arrange their faces and program their gestures, so can you.

Then do it.

Get up!

Get out!

Grab the first thing!

Hang on!

Let's go!

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT GOLD

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

EXPERIMENTS made to determine the possibility of turning baser metals into gold have at least brought out some very interesting facts about the distribution in nature of that fascinating metal.

Gold seems to have a wonderful power of leaving traces of itself in the most unexpected places. It takes very good care not to appear anywhere in large quantities, but it rivals the odoriferous substance musk in its ability to scatter and deposit infinitesimal particles as mementoes of its passage wherever it travels.

An almost unbelievable instance of this property is reported by Professor Haber in Germany. One of his assistants engaged in the attempt to confirm the reported transmutation of mercury into gold always found traces of gold in the substance that he was analyzing.

It was an exciting fact, but when other experimenters repeated the analysis of precisely the same substance and in the same way, not the slightest indication of gold could be found. Yet there was no doubt of the genuinness of the specimen that had been obtained.

Mystery Solved

The mystery was solved by an inquest into the personal habits of the first experimenter. He was accustomed to remove his gold-rimmed eye-glasses before making an analysis.

Then, without carefully cleansing his hands, he used his fingers in placing a piece of pure lead in the crucible that was employed in the experiment. Tests proved that this was the source of the mysterious traces of gold found.

Simple contact between the hands and the gold rims of the glasses sufficed to produce an infinitesimal deposit of gold on the fingers, which again by mere touch, transferred itself to the surface of the lead used and reappeared in the analysis as if it had been a new creation produced by the processes of the experiment.

This also illustrates the almost inconceivable delicacy of the tests employed in modern chemical analysis.

It is no wonder that chemistry has proved itself to be a "Sherlock Holmes" among the invisible atoms of terrestial matter and among giant star clusters so far away that their millions of mighty suns appear, all together, like an illuminated thistle-down in the field of a great telescope.

Niggardly Supply

With regard to the efforts to obtain gold by atomic transformation, it should not be supposed that the investigators are moved by a hope, or expectation, of getting the precious metal in quantities perceptible to ordinary observation.

The scientific fact of the possibility of the transformation, and not any economic result that might arise from it, is what they are after.

If they should ever succeed on a large scale, it would be an occasion for governmental interference and supervision—at least if gold was to continue to be the world's monetary standard.

Nature's niggardly supply of gold within human reach is, of course, the principal cause of its unique usefulness in human affairs. Deep within the earth it is not unlikely that immense quantities of this heavy metal exist, but placed, as if by design, far beyond our reach, while iron, even more abundant, no doubt, in the planet's core, is also abundant on the surface.

The more iron we have, the better; but not so with gold. Of that the world has always had, in every age, quite as much as was good for it.

It is just as well, then, that the chemists, content with finding traces of gold, have no overwhelming desire to produce it in huge ingots that would overset the financial balance of the planet and rob our richest ornamental metal of its distinction.

ARE YOU SIDE-STEPPING TROUBLE AND PROBLEMS?

If you were called a "gold digger" or a "money-grabber" you would be insulted; yet you may be that in a way you do not realize.

You give as little attention as possible to perfecting yourself for the job which your employer pays you to do.

You don't hesitate to make that plain.

But you don't want to attack the real problem of your job if it incurs any extra time to study things out.

You are a side-stepper, when it comes to avoiding trouble and problems.

You wish some well-to-do relative would remember you in a will.

You want a comfortable income, but you want an easy way to earn it.

You have never figured on giving the worth of the money you receive.

You are not nearly as expert at your job as you might be and it worries your employer much of the time.

Perhaps he likes you and feels that your incompetence is more heedlessness than anything else.

But is it? Are you giving him a square deal?
